WHY have buses? Are they to carry passengers, or to make money?

There seems to be a difference of opinion on this point.

For people shivering on the street as they wait for buses that never seem to come, it is a real argument—as real as the cold wind that is blowing down their necks.

The sight of a herd of people cowering in store entrances at bus stops has become quite common. Since the B.C. Electric cut schedules, there are more people waiting a longer time. And it's cold out there.

Yes, they should look up their schedules and find exactly when the buses are running. But few people can be bothered to do that. Anyway, the schedules may be changed tomorrow.

Why is there such a long time between buses? Because the schedules have been drawn up by executives whose chief aim is to save money.

Until recently the bus system was an arm of a privately-owned company dedicated to making money for its shareholders. This is where the argument starts.

"What's awful about making a profit?" asks Jack.

"Nothing," says Bill. "But buses aren't there to make a profit. They exist to carry people. You don't make a profit on roads and bridges. Why make a profit on buses?"

"Roads are different."

And so the argument goes on. It concerns everyone—not only the bus commuters huddled under awnings, but the people who drive to work in limousines. All of them will have to pay for the buses in one way or another—in taxes or in fares.

As a private company, the B.C. Electric was losing money on its buses. But it was making money on the sale of power. The losses on the bus lines helped pay the company's taxes.

The buses were not losing as much money as they seemed to be. But they couldn't be allowed to lose too much. So B.C. Electric executives ordered cuts in bus services—fewer buses, shorter runs.

Now the B.C. Electric has been taken over by the provincial government. But the bus system is still behaving as if it were in the hands of a private company. Service has been cut back. There still is a long time between buses.

There is talk of handing the bus service over to Victoria—and Victoria doesn't want it... not yet, anyway.

"The B.C. Electric and its experts couldn't make the buses pay, so how can a bunch of amateurs like us expect to do any better?" city fathers ask.

One answer to that question is that no bus line—publicly or privately-owned—should be run by amateurs. The city can hire experts, too.

After you have hired the experts, you still face the same old puzzle: What do you want the experts to do?

Do you want them to run a bus system that makes money, or a system that provides a good service at a financial loss?

Say you want the buses to make money, how can you do it? You can go on cutting down services. But people will get tired of standing in the rain. A lot of them won't bother riding the buses. They will drive cars instead. So the buses will lose more money. Then you'll cut the schedules further, and lose more money...

This is the method that the B.C. Electric experts used, and it didn't work. It failed to make a profit, and it failed to give us an adequate service.

Perhaps we need a different kind of expert, following a different policy.

In a growing city, where there are long distances to span and empty spaces to fill, you may have to spend a lot of money on the buses while the city is growing up. You may have to run at a loss.

A private company can't afford to do that. Such a policy is not fair to its shareholders. However, a publicly-owned company can afford to do it—if the taxpayers agree.

The bus service can be made an instrument for building up the town according to a plan, so that the town can be efficiently policed and protected against fire at the lowest cost.

Cheap fares might mean more people riding buses and therefore fewer cars, less money spent on controlling downtown traffic. Downtown merchants would get more business. There would be fewer stores vacant, fewer merchants going broke. Property values and taxes would go up.

Money "lost" on the buses might come back twofold in tax money.

To make these things happen, we need two things: Careful planning, and money.

At present the city of Victoria does not seem big enough—in mind or money—to run this kind of bus service. But Greater Victoria could do the trick if the provincial government offered cash help and prodded the separate municipalities to work in partnership.

Malahat Surveyor Capt. Mellin Dies

One of the surveyors who laid out the original Malahat highway, Capt. Harry de Moleyns Mellin died Thursday in a Victoria nursing home at the age of 94.

Capt. Mellin, who at one time in his career was secretary to B.C. Lieutenant-governor Sir Frank Bernard, was born in England, educated in Switzerland and came to Vancouver Island in 1895.

After farming for a time in the Somenos and Quamichan districts, he served as provincial inspector of construction for two years, then in 1911 was appointed to the permanent staff of the provincial survey branch.

His membership in B.C. civil service was interrupted by the First World War—in which he served in the Rifle Brigade—then was resumed after the hostilities. In 1932 he retired from the Forest Service branch.

Capt. Mellin was a life member of the Union Club and belonged to the Canadian Club and the United Services Institute.

Survivors include a son, Andrew; a granddaughter and two great-grandchildren, all in Victoria.

Rev. T. D. B. Ragg will conduct funeral services Monday at 1:30 p.m. at Hayward's funeral home, and burial will be in the churchyard at St. Luke's Anglican Church.

Native of Victoria Dies Here at 76

Native of Victoria and oldest member in point of years of service of Colfax Rebekah Lodge No. 1, IOOF, Mrs. Alice Mary Gonnaon, 76, died Thursday at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Mrs. Gonnaon's father came to this city in the early 1880s. In later years she recalled having climbed over the rocks that later became the site of the legislative buildings, on her way to school.

She was the widow of Rudolph Carl Gonnaon, and the family home was at 1741 Lee Avenue.

Besides membership in the Rebekahs, Mrs. Gonnaon was active in Eastern Star Lodge No. 17, Victoria.

Survivors include two sons, Harold, 2424 Lincoln Road, and Roy in Saskatoon; five grand-

A special commemorative stamp honoring Victoria City's centenary will likely be issued next year, probably in August. Postmaster-General William Hamilton said here yesterday.

The one doubtful item—whether there is sufficient time to design and print such a stamp.

"We're taking a pretty careful look at this thing," said Mr. Hamilton, adding he personally was in favor of issuing a commemorative stamp.

ASKS FOR IDEAS
He asked reporters for ideas on what Victoria feature could best be depicted on a stamp.

Mr. Hamilton was in Victoria for a personal survey at the operations of the city post office.

GOOD OPERATION
"It's a remarkable operation here," he said. "What struck me most was the spirit and enthusiasm of the people who work there."

Mr. Hamilton said Victoria Conservative MP Bert McPhillips had personally taken up the question of issuing a centennial stamp.

NOT NORMALLY
Normally a city wouldn't be so honored but Victoria was a provincial capital.

The postmaster-general said the post office receives relatively few complaints—about 96 for every 1,000,000 letters handled.

Stop Fast-Buck Sale Of Columbia-Strachan

Federal government action to prevent B.C.'s "conspiracy" with U.S. interests to sell out the province in exchange for a fast buck, was called for last night by Robert Strachan, leader of the provincial opposition.

Some 30 delegates attended the meeting.

DEASTIC ACTION
Mr. Strachan told a founding convention of the New Democratic party in Esquimalt constituency drastic action is needed to ensure development of Columbia River power for all Canadians.

"The government should move in on this situation even if it means carrying out the entire project under federal auspices," he said.

HOLLOW DESIRE
"The only justification I can see for the Sacred attitude is the hollow desire to humiliate both the present federal government and the previous administration—which at least had the courage to halt the Kaiser dam giveaway."

The present High Arrow dam plan, Mr. Strachan said, is nothing more than the old Kaiser deal in disguise.

Khrushchev Warns Finnish Chief:

Germans Shaking Peace of Baltic

Nikita's Aim to Bolster Neighbor's Neutrality

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev yesterday warned Finnish President Kekkonen that Russia no longer regards northern Europe as an "area of peace and tranquility," the official Tass news agency reported.

Kekkonen met Khrushchev in Novosibirsk, Siberia, to discuss co-operation in mutual defence measures because of what the Soviet considers a growing West German threat in northern Europe.

Some Finns fear such "co-operation" could mean the return of Soviet troops to their neutral nation on Russia's borders. But Khrushchev did not bring up this possibility in the Tass report of his statement, although he did mention the Soviet withdrawal from its naval base in Porkkala, Finland, several years ago.

Diplomatic observers in Moscow believe Khrushchev, perhaps under pressure from Soviet military leaders, seeks military concessions from Finland, possibly radar bases on Finnish territory.

Khrushchev said West Germany had transformed Scandinavia into a potential battleground and promised action to curb "Hitlerite" border revision demands.

The main purpose of the talks, observers believe, is political. These are considered Khrushchev's two chief aims:

• To guarantee Kekkonen's re-election, thus assuring Russia of six more years of Finnish neutrality. Khrushchev praised Kekkonen's policy and said it has Russia's "complete confidence."

• To pressure Norway and Denmark to weaken their military ties with NATO.

Khrushchev, who spoke at a luncheon for Kekkonen, referred again and again to a threat from West Germany in the Baltic and Germany's growing ties with its NATO allies in Scandinavia, Denmark and Norway.

Shelter Millions By June

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (UPI) — Civil defence officials told President Kennedy yesterday that a federal program for fallout shelters to protect some 50,000,000 Americans has been speeded up by six months and will be completed by next June.

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said Defence Secretary Robert McNamara had reported to the president "on the status of the identifying, locating and stocking of shelter areas for some 50,000,000 Americans" under some $200,000,000 already provided by Congress.

"This was to have been completed by December, 1962," Salinger said, "but progress has been at a very rapid rate and it will finish six months ahead of schedule."

Milk Safety Plan Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government fallout experts have proposed that the federal government subsidize installation of newly-developed equipment to decontaminate milk if radioactivity reaches unacceptable levels.

Few scientists expect contamination to reach unacceptable levels this spring, but the experts are preparing a series of preparedness measures.

GORDON LONSDALE
... really Conon Molody

Convicted Agent Born in Moscow

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gordon Arnold Lonsdale, convicted member of an espionage ring operating in Britain, actually is a Russian who lived briefly in the U.S. and Canada, the FBI said yesterday.

He was found guilty of stealing British naval secrets in March. At the time he was listed as a Canadian. An American couple and two British nationals were convicted with him.

The FBI said Lonsdale is a 38-year-old Moscow-born Russian named Conon Molody. He first came to the United States in 1933 as the 11-year-old son of a woman who really was his aunt, the FBI said.

"He resided in Berkeley, Calif., until around 1938 when he returned to Russia," the FBI said. While in Berkeley, he attended a private school. He is believed to have served in the Red Army prior to his assignment as a Soviet espionage agent.

FBI director J. Edgar Hoover said an investigation has established that Molody came to Canada in 1954 from the Soviet Union. There, he obtained a passport and birth certificate in the name of Gordon Arnold Lonsdale.

Brilliant Defence Lawyer Suspended for Misconduct

LONDON (AP) — Victor Durand, one of Britain's most brilliant defence lawyers, has been stripped of his practice for professional misconduct.

Durand, who has figured in some of the biggest criminal cases of the last decade, was suspended by his fellow lawyers of the Inner Temple—one of London's historical legal Inns of Court.

Durand had defended in High Court a police officer sued by a press photographer for alleged false imprisonment and assault.

Durand did not disclose during the trial that before the case came up the police officer had been demoted from chief inspector to station sergeant, considered by an appeal court as essential to the case.

Explanation is Due

THE ACTION of the Burrard Dry Dock Company Limited, which includes Yarrow's of Esquimalt, in paying a dividend of $6.50 on each of its "B" class shares, amounting in all to about $4,800,000, is a matter of public interest.

All the 250,000 "B" shares of Burrard are held by former lieutenant-governor Clarence Wallace, president of Burrard, and his brother, Mr. Hubert A. Wallace, vice-president, and various members of their families.

The remaining capitalization of the company is in the form of 750,000 "A" class shares, partly held by the public. On these the maximum annual extra dividend allowable is 30 cents, which is what is being paid on this occasion.

An extraordinary thing is that Burrard Dry Dock has not informed its "A" class shareholders why it is taking the massive $4,800,000 dividend out of the firm's accumulated surplus of $13,000,000.

That, however, is the business of the Class "A" shareholders, but they are not the only ones who are entitled to an explanation.

For many years, the Burrard Dry Dock Company and its affiliate in Esquimalt have been receiving federal government contracts for warships and other departmental vessels. In order to meet the higher labor and material costs of building on the west coast the government has been paying Burrard, and other Pacific shipyards, a price higher than they would have had to pay for similar vessels built in eastern Canadian yards.

In addition this year, in order to help the shipbuilding and shipowning industries of Canada, the federal government is giving subsidies totalling up to 40 per cent of the contract cost of building ships in Canadian yards for Canadian owners.

To this degree public money is involved in the revenues of the Burrard company, and the unexplained withdrawal of $4,800,000 from the accounts of the company is far removed from being exclusively a family or even a company affair.

The refusal of Mr. Clarence Wallace or other members of his family to give an explanation, does nothing to clarify the matter. "No comment" in this case is tantamount to suggesting that nothing the company might say would alleviate the situation.

It is quite possible that the Wallace family may be taking this step to provide funds for possible succession-duty calls, and if they are complying with fiscal regulations in this respect that could be a reasonable explanation, but the fact that they have not taken the public and the government into their confidence leaves the matter open to wide conjecture.

To a family which has a distinguished record of service to the province and to the country this is a situation which runs counter to its tradition.

Raising a Bogey

AS THEY LOOK for bogeys under the bed Mr. J. Donald Smith, mayoralty candidate, and Alderman M. Mooney, likely candidate, should really get together. Mr. Mooney suggests that some mysterious and sinister group is bent on gaining control of civic affairs; Mr. Smith asks "When did they lose control?"

If this alleged machine had already fastened its grip at the City Hall, as Mr. Smith implies, that would mean of course that Mr. Mooney, an alderman for the past decade, has been amenable to its domination.

One imagines that Alderman Mooney, and rightfully so, would reject any such assumption.

In point of fact Victoria has been happily free of any "machine" that might dominate its civic climate. One need only recall the innumerable city council debates of the past few years to see how untrammelled in this respect aldermen have been. Each has patently been paddling his own independent canoe.

Nor is there any sign of a "machine" in the present election campaign, even though Messrs. Mooney and Smith affect to see one. Indeed the last attempt at a uniform slate, suggesting a machine of sorts, was that headed by Mr. Smith himself two years ago, when the candidates concerned, including himself, were defeated.

Victoria voters do not take kindly to "machines," that much is obvious. Nor in any case can any single candidate be deemed to be a "machine"; it would be small comfort to the aldermanic board if he were.

It is a pity to have tactics of this kind introduced into the mayoralty election. Mr. Mooney has complained that certain cards found in city hall corridors constituted a smear against him, but innuendoes about mysterious machines are of precisely the same nature.

They can well be done without. Let the candidates concentrate on their platforms and allow merit to decide.

Shifting the Blame

THE SOVIET UNION'S preposterous attempt to blame the West for provoking the recent massacre of 13 Italian airmen in the Congo is patently designed to divert suspicion falling upon the pro-Communist premier of Oriental province, Antoine Gizenga.

Gizenga, apart from being political head of the province in which the brutal murder took place and vice-premier of the UN-recognized Congo Central Government, has long claimed—with Moscow approval—that he is Patrice Lumumba's rightful heir to the premiership of the republic.

In this he is supported by the Communist-led Lumumbists who have concentrated their not inconsiderable political influence upon the Congolese army with the aim of creating disaffection among these poorly-led troops.

First reports of the deaths of the Italians did, in fact, make it quite clear that the airmen were murdered by mutinous Congolese soldiers who had switched their allegiance from the Central Government to Gizenga and his Lumumbists. Official Central Government statements in following days did nothing to lessen this suspicion.

With its latest move before the UN General Assembly the Soviet Union is now seeking desperately to prevent the Afro-Asian nations from drawing the obvious conclusion that Gizenga and his Communist followers were directly responsible for the massacre that has horrified the world.

However, whether or not this is accepted as fact by the UN General Assembly does not excuse the failure of the UN military command in The Congo to take swift retaliatory action against the murderers.

Latest reports indicate that the killers have escaped from the Kindu area despite attempts by the UN to seal them off and by all accounts they will now go unpunished for their gruesome crime.

Once again the UN military command has proven its inability to control the situation.

Easier Discussed Than Done

By ARTHUR BLANKLEY

PREMIER Jean Lesage's pledge to introduce far-reaching measures of electoral reform in the Province of Quebec has stirred some interest, however belatedly, in the subject here in Ottawa. The interest doesn't seem to go too deep and may well be limited to a general curiosity about how Mr. Lesage will deal with such difficulties as may arise.

No comparable national reforms seem to be contemplated.

Electoral reform doesn't seem to have figured prominently in the 1957-58 election promises which Prime Minister Diefenbaker is trying to implement in toto before the next general election.

The Liberals, too, passed it by.

Both parties have, at one time or another, discovered that election law reforms were easier discussed than implemented.

The last time that a serious effort was made, on any substantial scale, to introduce reforms, was in 1939.

At that time the Hon. C. G. "Chubby" Power, now a distinguished senator, introduced his famous Political Expenditures Bill.

The prospects seemed excellent. Mr. Power wasn't an obscure backbencher. He was, and had been since 1933, one of the brightest lights in the cabinet presided over by W. L. Mackenzie King. Then too, that government had been elected, in part at least, on a reform ticket. Mr. King himself still regarded himself, at times, as a radical.

The project was turned over for study to a special Commons committee. That committee was composed of MPs who had discovered, each in his own way, the high and growing cost of elections. The committee approved the bill.

It would have brought plenty of changes in its wake.

It would have required political parties to make public their revenues and their expenditures.

Expenditures in individual constituencies, which have been known to run as high as $100,000 in a crash program to ensure that a highly-regarded candidate makes the grade, would have been limited severely. Each candidate would have been allowed $1,000 for personal expenses. In addition, he could spend no more than $100 on his campaign. He could have others spend in his interest an amount equal to 20 cents per registered voter in the constituency. Expenditures over and above this flexible ceiling would have been a breach of the law.

Another provision in the measure would have lifted responsibility for seeing that the law was not broken from the slender shoulders of individual returning officers and placed it squarely on the Chief Electoral Officer of Canada.

Returns of receipts and expenditures were to have been made to him and published in the Canada Gazette.

In addition: "... he was to have the power of inquiry following complaints filed by at least ten electors, who were required to deposit $200, which would be returned if the complaints were well-founded; results of such inquiry were to be forwarded to the Speaker of the House of Commons."

Some authorities felt—and still think—that the Power bill would have left a few loopholes. But there was and is a general agreement that it would have gone far to prevent abuses.

Senator Power himself described it at the time as "a businesslike piece of legislation... to modify the law (so) that the candidates would be enabled to apply to election campaigns the same open, sane businesslike methods that they apply in their own businesses."

But behind the scenes, the bill fared poorly. Unfortunately, its consideration came at a time when war was only a few months away and when other, more urgent matters were demanding attention. But there was more to it than this.

As Senator Power admitted years later, the bill "was laughed at, and the objective ridiculed as purely academic and idealistic."

Some of his cabinet colleagues disliked the measure, arguing that it might cause party funds to dry up. Others just couldn't work up much enthusiasm for the idea, one way or the other. Mr. King, it turned out, wasn't quite as radical as it might have been thought.

The Political Expenditures Bill was dropped. It disappeared scarcely a trace.

It made one brief and quite unsuccessful reappearance a decade later. Mr. Power, no longer in the cabinet and his party's senior and most useful rebel, reintroduced it. He made out an excellent case for it.

The bill received a formal first reading. It then advanced another step, receiving second reading without a single voice having been raised against it. But the Liberal government of 1949 was no more anxious to put its weight behind the Political Expenditures Bill than it had been ten years before.

Parliament was dissolved and the measure died on the order paper. It has never returned. Or has it? In 1949, Premier Jean Lesage was an up-and-coming Quebec Liberal in the Commons. And it may be that Senator Power's Political Expenditures Bill made a bigger impression on his mind than on those of most others who were in the Commons at the time.

Communist 'Liberalization'

How Far Will Khrushchev Go?

By PHILIP BYRNES

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV has documented and dramatized for the world the kind of Communism he is against. What remains an enigma is the kind of Communism he is for.

There is no reason to doubt that he is opposed to the Stalin-style police state, to personal dictatorship and to the blood purge. But why did Khrushchev decide at the last moment to turn the 22nd party congress into a post-humous trial of Stalin's rule?

Why did he disclose after eight years the gory details of the liquidation of the sinister Lavrenti Beria, who hoped to establish personal dictatorship through the strong arm of the secret police?

Why did he shatter the patched-up facade of Communist unity with his relentless onslaught on the Stalinist state of Albania, the world's smallest Communist country?

These questions can be logically answered only in the context of Khrushchev's quarrel with Mao Tse-tung and Chinese Communism. But the original issue in that dispute—Khrushchev's doctrine of the non-inevitability of war—had already been publicly resolved, in a compromise weighted in Khrushchev's favor, at the Red summit of 1960. This time Khrushchev was extending his attack—to the methods of the Chinese Communists inside their own country.

When Khrushchev denounced the methods Stalin used to collectivize the peasants in the thirties, his real target was China's inception of the commune system and forced industrialization in 1959.

When he exposed the terror purges of the Albanian Stalinists, his purpose was to prepare the delegates for revelations of similar tactics in China. For world Communism has now learned the code for the Russia-China dialogue.

When China assailed Khrushchev, it ascribed his "failings" to "revisionist Yugoslavism." When Khrushchev hit out at China, he speaks of "Albanian dogmatism."

But the key question remains: Having copiously discredited the kind of Communist rule exemplified by Stalin, what pattern of state and party power does Khrushchev propose to erect in its place?

The first clues in this mystery are likely to come in Khrushchev's future dispositions of three European Communist leaders who rose to power under Stalinist tutelage and, unlike China's Mao, are yet controllable by Khrushchev's political machine.

They are: East Germany's Walter Ulbricht, most obvious living symbol of Stalinist tactics and doctrine; Italy's Palmiro Togliatti, contemporary of Stalin who is still the most powerful Communist in the West;

France's Maurice Thorez, 61-year-old Stalinist been in decline since the French economic recovery began in the early 50s.

If the tendencies Khrushchev exhibited at the Russian congress are extended to the European Communist movement, one can expect this result:

Ulbricht and Thorez will soon lose their jobs. Togliatti will keep his.

The spine-bearded Ulbricht, mistrusted even by German Communists as the man who pointed to their comrades in pre-war Stalinist purges, is held responsible for the East German refugee flood to the West.

Ulbricht flattered himself that he had recovered his prestige in world Communism when he successfully threw up his Berlin wall in the face of the Western allies. But this is unlikely to satisfy Khrushchev, now reported asking awkward questions about the iron-beak bureaucracy that made East Germany so unbearable in the years before the wall sealed it from the West.

In Warsaw and West Berlin, observers expect to see Ulbricht replaced by 52-year-old Communist organizer Karl Schirdewan, who was impeached and fired by Ulbricht in 1958 for criticism of the party line. Schirdewan is reported to be the man Khrushchev has chosen to effect sweeping liberalization of the East German regime.

Thorez, too, has attracted Mr. Khrushchev's attention only by failures. He has been unbending in his Stalinism. He has hounded France's most brilliant younger Communists out of the party.

Ironically, he is now under attack for being too "soft"—in his opposition to the de Gaulle regime and in his support of the Algerian nationalists.

Togliatti is also in trouble. Russian bomb-testing and Khrushchev threats against Italy have seriously weakened his party. A hail of tomatoes greeted him on his return to Rome from Moscow.

But he has always been a more flexible and original Communist than Thorez. Sometimes, in Stalin's day, the first hints of switches in the Comintern line came from his speeches. It is so today with Khrushchev.

Recently Pravda gave prominence to a Togliatti speech attacking Albanian and Chinese errors as "unforgivable" and asserting that "it would be erroneous to treat Yugoslavia and its regime as if they were enemies."

Khrushchev has temporized before with the "revisionist" Tito. The Togliatti speech hinted that, in the interests of anti-Stalinist solidarity, he may wish for another truce with the Yugoslavs.

It seems inevitable that the anti-Stalinist assault Khrushchev has mounted in Russia will spill over into both Western Communist parties and the eastern satellite regimes. But it is not easy to predict just how liberal the "liberalization" will be.

It would be optimistic to hope that Khrushchev will act on the recent structure of Adam Schaff, Poland's chief Marxist theoretician and a close friend of Premier Wladyslaw Gomułka.

Warned Schaff, in a series of articles called "The Conflict of Humanism": "Restrictions on individual freedom in the Communist world are the West's strongest trump card against Communism and Marxism today."

"It is easier to reject verbally and to condemn the mistakes of the period of the cult of the individual than to change the practice which was accepted and which prevailed in that period."

Yes, indeed.

Sobering Facts

By MARQUEE CHIDEN

THE report that General Maxwell Taylor made to President Kennedy on his mission to South Viet Nam is considered by those who have seen it to be a sharply realistic analysis of the Communist threat in Southeast Asia and what can be done about it. Studying it before he went to speak in the West, the president in his sobering words on the limits of American power and influence had the Taylor report plainly in mind.

The report is far more than a military document. It faces up to the uncertain political situation in South Viet Nam and what should be done in Saigon by the Viet-Nam government of President Ngo Dinh Diem and what must be done from this capital in collaboration with Diem.

In this it reflects Taylor's broad grasp of world problems and the incisive quality of his mind. After a punishing tour that included jumping through the jungle, low-flying helicopter flights over the mountainous terrain and lengthy conferences with Diem and others in his government as well as Americans there, he had two days in Baguio, the mountain resort in the Philippines. There he wrote the core of the report.

Certain of Taylor's military recommendations have become known. They are aimed at making more effective use of the large force Diem already has under arms. The army is to be increased to a strength of 170,000. In addition, more than 100,000 more are to be armed police and village militia. These forces have been equipped with American military aid totalling more than a billion dollars.

One weakness is intelligence, which has been diffuse and contradictory with separate Vietnamese intelligence services working at cross purposes. This is to be coordinated and greatly stepped up under American direction, aided by the use of American reconnaissance jets.

American planes are also to be assigned to another equally important mission—supplying the patrols pushing across the mountainous plateau on the Laotian border from whence much of the Communist infiltration is believed to come. Taylor was told that Vietnamese forces managing to reach this critical area are compelled to turn back almost at once for lack of supplies.

An important recommendation is for greatly increased patrol activity in the border areas. This means that advanced American ranger training will be given to more Vietnamese troops. New training missions will be sent to Saigon.

Obvious recommendations already being implemented are for greatly increased shipments of food to relieve the need growing out of the disastrous flood in the Mekong Valley.

Far more complex and tied up with pride, prestige and ancient habits of the Far East is the political-administrative side of the report. Taylor found, as other visitors have, that a roadblock to action is Diem's own office.

In his talks with Taylor President Diem was quite frank in acknowledging this. He complained of how hard it was to find anyone he could trust who also had the requisite ability. Together with his brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu, who has the title of Adviser to the President, Diem and other members of his numerous family have closely held executive power. Diem said he would welcome American experts in his administration who might break through some of the barriers that have blocked not only administrative moves but military changes as well.

Whether such experts could work effectively in the tangled administrative political setup in Saigon is a question currently being canvassed by the two capitals. But, as General Taylor suggested in his report, an even more difficult question must be answered.

That goes to the will of the Vietnamese people to resist the fanatical marauders sent to murder and/or subvert a people by nature gentle and pacific. Or to put it another way the question is whether the mass of the people relate their fate—their future—with the present government to the extent of being willing to fight and sacrifice for its existence.

As Taylor arrived, Colonel Hoang Thy Nam, who had been serving as liaison between the International Control Commission, was kidnapped with his family by guerrillas only a short distance from Saigon. Members of his family were released. But shortly afterward his barbarously mutilated body was found. Would the peasant in his rice field understand that Colonel Nam was only the first and most obvious victim and that he would be next if he stood in the way of the marauders? That is the great unanswered question.

Trade Loss Fears Unify Family Against Motherland's Marriage

Opponents Find Allies Inside U.K.

Despite a widely held belief in this country, opposition to Britain's entry into the European Common Market is by no means restricted to Canadian cabinet ministers.

The fact is that the strong out forces opposed to such a move are to be found within the United Kingdom itself. There, unlike the situation developing in Canada, the issue has cut squarely across political party lines to such an extent that no less than a third of the Conservative members of Parliament and half the Labor M.P.s now oppose Britain's membership.

By adopting this attitude they have allied themselves with all the senior members of the Commonwealth and a good many of the junior partners in the family.

On one or more occasions the prime ministers of Australia, New Zealand, the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, Nigeria, India and Pakistan, have all stated their objections to Britain's entry into the E.C.M.

Their opinions, along with Canada's, are, to a large extent, based on the selfish view that if Britain enters the E.C.M. imperial trade preference must go. But the matter goes further than this. There is also a political involvement to be considered as well as the immediate economic pressures that will be brought to bear upon the United Kingdom if she amalgamates with the "Inner Six."

It is these aspects that are worrying the British parliamentarians most. Briefly, those opposing British entry into E.C.M. foresee five major disadvantages:

● A loss of British sovereignty.

● The flooding of the British market with cheap European goods.

● The removal of Commonwealth preferential trade rates and the subsequent collapse of the Commonwealth itself as a practical organization.

● The involvement of Britain in the internal conflict of complex Continental politics, and

● The infliction of a severe blow to the majority of Commonwealth countries whose balance of national economy depends largely on their special trading arrangements with the United Kingdom.

Among the political factors cited by E.C.M. opponents is that the United Kingdom would have only four votes in the European ruling council, as have France, Germany and Italy.

However, Belgium and Holland each have two votes and Luxembourg one — which means that these last three countries with a total population of less than half Britain's, could outvote her.

One critic puts it this way: "If ever Britain signed the Treaty of Rome she would cease to be a sovereign power. All the major policy decisions would be taken not in London — but in Brussels."

Here is what other E.C.M. critics, both at home in Britain and abroad in the Commonwealth have to say: Keith Holyoake, Prime Minister of New Zealand, in a complaint to the German and French ambassadors sounded a warning that the Market, purportedly devised to counter Communism, would grievously harm one of the world's most democratic nations — New Zealand.

Robert Menzies, Prime Minister of Australia: "Negotiations with Britain as a separate power would be impossible if she joins the Common Market."

John Ormond, chairman of the New Zealand Meat Board:

"It is disgraceful. Our trading relations with our blood brothers in Britain are about to be dictated by the French and Germans ..."

Viscount Blinchington, M.P.: "The government has taken leave of its senses in applying to join the Common Market."

Anthony Fell, Conservative M.P.: "The government is going to wake up one morning to find that the whole country, or very large sections of it, is absolutely opposed to what is being done."

Great Common Market Dilemma

Commonwealth Can't Join May Fall Apart in Isolation

Workers Stand To Lose Gains

Among the most telling arguments being put forward by anti-E.C.M. factions in Britain is their claim that one of the first moves to be made under European economic amalgamation would be the equalization of wages.

Therefore, they say, workers in the United Kingdom, whose hourly wage rate is considerably higher than those of their fellows workers in any of the present "Inner Six" countries, would stand to lose no matter what formula is adopted.

At present the average hourly wages compare as follows:

Britain: 70c.
W. Germany: 85c.
Belgium: 60c.
France: 50c.
Italy: 37c.
Holland: 45c.

Though it is unlikely that all trade will cease between Britain and Commonwealth countries if the move is made, it is certain that the elimination of the present imperial trade preference agreement, intra-Commonwealth trade would be severely cut.

British exports on the subject have estimated that if there is a drop of as little as 15 per cent in United Kingdom Commonwealth exports, Britain would be forced to increase her exports to the Common Market countries by almost 50 per cent to maintain the balance.

A London newspaper warns: "We (Britain) would be endangering our valuable Commonwealth markets for the doubtful benefits of European trade. Example — last year Canada alone bought almost twice as many British motor cars as did all the six E.C.M. countries put together — 91,315 against 50,772."

"Nor can we hope to lead Europe as a substitute for the leadership of the Commonwealth. The Germans do four times more trade than we do with the other members of the Common Market."

"Power follows trade. And, like it or not, we will have to follow Germany."

James McMillan, a London Daily Express columnist who recently toured the European Common Market area, has this to say:

"Almost every household in the country has a relative in the Commonwealth. But if we go into Europe, the Commonwealth will be left outside, excluded by trade barriers, political, military, and economic agreements."

His road to amassing a fortune started with a $2,000 loan from his timber-merchant father.

From vacuum cleaners and refrigerators he branched into aircraft and armaments in the 30s. This got him blacklisted in

Shipyards, Farms Auto Industry Will Feel Squeeze

The efforts of the Macmillan government to persuade the people of Britain that entry into the European Common Market would solve most of the United Kingdom's economic ills have failed to prevent grave doubts arising as to what fate will meet some of Britain's well established and, to date, remunerative industries.

Among those now questioning the advisability of entering into the economic amalgamation are the shipbuilders, the automobile manufacturers, the clock makers and the shoe-makers.

Shipbuilders are worried because with a diversion of trade from the Commonwealth to Europe fewer large cargo ships will be needed and there will be a dropping off of orders. Further to this, British shipbuilders will be faced with competing with France and West Germany without the advantages of imperial preference rates on building materials and higher wages to pay.

British automobile manufacturers will be faced with the same problem as well as the likelihood of European car manufacturing being concentrated in one place as it is in the United States, with Germany as the most likely location.

Clock and watchmaking, as well as the footwear industry will be hard hit by competition from Switzerland (an E.C.M. associate member) and Italy, already producing at a lower cost than Britain.

Farmers are also worried about their position. France has large agricultural surpluses and the fear is that these will be unloaded in Britain.

It is said that if the United Kingdom enters E.C.M. the British subsidy on food to the consumers will be withdrawn to conform with the Continental system where the customer pays the full price.

Thus the British householder would no longer have the advantage of buying non-taxed food from the Commonwealth nations, as all imported foodstuffs will be taxed under the Common Market regulations — which includes everything from tea and bread to a pound of sirloin beef.

In Italy and France a pound of beef today costs anything from one-third to twice what the British buyer pays for it.

One of Wenner-Gren's most prized possessions was a silver plaque he received from the Canadian government expressing gratitude for his help in rescuing 375 persons — 100 of them Canadians — from the torpedoed liner Athenia off the coast of Ireland Sept. 3, 1939, the first night of the war.

He was in the area aboard his yacht the Southern Cross and his and his crew worked tirelessly picking up survivors.

Attorney General Robert Bonner, commenting on the death of Mr. Wenner-Gren, said:

"Despite the fact that he was harshly judged, his interest in this province is going to prove to have been a vital stimulus to northern development."

One cannot go into the House of Commons at Ottawa, or study the qualifications of the deputy ministers and their executives who are responsible for the functioning of their respective divisions or government, without becoming aware that Canada will thrive and prosper unless political palliatives, pressures and other stimuli defeat good intentions.

Much of our undisguised anxiety will vanish if a strong cabinet, which would be an ornament to Canada, were selected from the most able minds and tongues that will be available subsequent to the 1962 election. We need cool logic and detached examination of facts in place of rhetorical generalizations. If we are to meet and solve the constantly changing conditions.

As noted above, 21 per cent of Canada's total export trade is with other Commonwealth countries, of which nearly two-thirds goes to Britain.

In Australia's case nearly half her total export trade is with other Commonwealth nations, of which more than half goes to Britain. Britain also accounts for nearly all New Zealand's Commonwealth export trade — 64 per cent of her total external sales.

India, Ceylon, Ghana, Nigeria and the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland all sell more to Britain than to any other country within or without the Commonwealth.

On the other hand Canada and the other Commonwealth nations buy 42 per cent of all goods exported by the United Kingdom.

Trust Firm Breaks Mortgage Barrier

By HARRY YOUNG

Colonial Business Editor

The other day the National Trust Co. announced it was willing to lend money on first mortgage at 6 1/2 per cent. It was the first time for a long while such money has been available at under 7 per cent.

Indeed it is not so many months ago since the most favorable first mortgage rate was 7 1/2 per cent.

JUNE BUDGET

The lead towards lower interest rates emanated from the June federal budget. The banks have since dropped their prime rate by degrees to a present level of 5 1/2 per cent. The NHA home loan rate dropped recently to 6 1/2 per cent from 6 3/4 per cent.

The National Trust, in breaking the seven per cent barrier on the downside, may be signalling the start of better times for conventional mortgage borrowing.

"Now that the first step has been taken, we expect others to follow," said a spokesman for a Victoria firm doing a large amount of mortgage business. "Our present rate is far too high compared with the going rate on the other side of the line."

He said money was available for conventional mortgages in Seattle at 5 1/2 per cent and the differential between this rate and the 7 per cent called for in B.C. was too great.

SO ATTRACTIVE

"Canada cannot hope to keep its dollar at a discount if our interest rates are made so attractive to U.S. investors," he said.

Money for loans at the Canadian chartered banks is plentiful, but banks are limited in their home mortgage activity to NHA approved loans.

NEW CNR PLAN

Canadian National Railways has announced a plan whereby it proposes to sell or rent parts of its properties across Canada for joint commercial or industrial development by the purchaser and the railways.

The aim is to provide joint enterprise between industry and the railway.

NEW THOUGHTS NEEDED

A plea for some new thinking about Canadian manufacturing industries was made this week by H. George De Young, chairman of the National Productivity Council and president of Atlas Steel.

Mr. De Young in a speech in Toronto said it was a false assumption that the Canadian property had to be based solely on raw material and agricultural exports.

"We have the raw materials, we could have cheap energy and we have intelligent, trainable unemployed people," he said.

COSTLY ENERGY

Despite this, "we send our raw materials to foreign lands for manufacture where energy is costly and there is over-employment. Then we buy back the manufactured goods at a trading loss and keep our people on relief," said Mr. De Young.

Isn't that just what is happening in the iron and copper mining industry in B.C. today? We ship all our concentrates to Japan and buy them back in finished form to build our ships and other durables.

Winnipeg (CP)—Most prices turned irregular in late trading following rallying trends earlier in the session. The oats market was fairly broad and active, with substantial buying attributed to U.S. interests.

There was moderate trading in flax.

The rye market was erratic.

CHICAGO (AP)—The grain futures market became generally firm with wheat leading the advances on gains running to a cent a bushel.

There was a good deal of hedge selling in corn.

Liquor Board Staff Wins Pension Boost

Employees of the B.C. Liquor Control Board will receive a general increase in superannuation payments, Col. Donald McGugan, board chairman, announced yesterday.

The increase follows extensive investigations over several months and will be effective Aug. 1, 1961. Approximately 750 board employees have been brought within the scope of the Civil Service Superannuation Act. The announcement stated no employee would be adversely affected and there will be substantial increases all round, especially among those with long service.

Transport Agency Coming?

OTTAWA (CP) — A new national transport tribunal may be established to advise the federal cabinet on policy decisions involving all forms of transportation in Canada.

Through research and planning, the tribunal would act as a federal advisory body and would help hammer out overall national policies for rail, road, water, air and pipeline transportation.

A proposal along these lines may emerge as one of the key recommendations in the second MacPherson royal commission report on transportation, to be delivered soon to Prime Minister Diefenbaker. In its first report, last April, the commission indicated a need for some such agency.

Americans Doubt Five-Mill Rate In Columbia River Power Sale

Top American power experts yesterday applauded the possible ending of the Victoria-Ottawa stalemate on Columbia River development but added they did not think there was a market for five-mill power in the U.S.

Meanwhile it was learned that last week in Seattle Premier Bennett had a lengthy discussion on the possible sale of Canadian power in the U.S. with Kinsey Robinson of the Washington Waterpower Co., chief spokesman for private power interests in the Pacific Northwest.

NO COMMENT

Mr. Robinson said yesterday he did not wish to comment, although he admitted a meeting had been held.

Premier Bennett, who also met with President Kennedy, said on his return from Seattle he was "more confident than ever" B.C. power could be sold for five mills.

NO MARKET

Commented one American official yesterday: "There is no market here for five-mill power."

Said another: "The price will probably be closer to 3.7 mills in his (Premier Bennett's) pocket once wheeling and transmission charges have been paid."

The officials, mindful of

Likely End of Feud Hailed

Ottawa's displeasure that Premier Bennett had conferred directly with President Kennedy on the subject, asked their names not be used.

"We don't want to upset the applicart," said one.

The officials were gleeful, however, that Premier Bennett had declared B.C. will agree to the long-stalled Canadian ratification of the Columbia treaty as soon as a provincial water licence is issued, probably about February.

TREATY DEADLINE

Earlier they had stated that March should be considered a reasonable deadline for Canadian ratification of the treaty. "We have to start some construction soon to stop this disastrous flooding which occurs every year," said a U.S. spokesman. "I think the treaty is a wonderful thing for both of our countries."

FEAT OF CREDIT

Fulton will speak on power at Prince George.

Yesterday B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner said Ottawa's "supposed injured innocence" over the premier's meeting with the U.S. president was ironic.

U.S. SOURCES

Federal Canadian officials had been quoting U.S. sources for months in an attempt to be-labor B.C., he said. "But when an American statement doesn't fit it becomes an international incident," said Mr. Bonner.

Heck of a Wreck

Jackhammers, dynamite and shovels were needed to clear wreckage after this driverless five-ton Evans Coleman and Evans dump truck loaded with 1,000-pound boulder slid on ice on private driveway (centre of picture), slipped its brakes and travelled 50 feet before crashing into 30-foot mountain ash tree outside home of Mrs. F. L. Fallis, 1330 Bond. Truck, being used to haul away rocks from a Luney Construction excavation, was unattended. After clipping tree, weight of boulder dug truck's nose into dirt. Sudden halt tipped boulder from back and it ripped off left hand door as it fell, smashing sidewalk. Both wheels of truck snapped off, one rolling 180 feet before hitting front steps at 1319 Bond. Victoria Auto Wreckers tow truck driver Verne Amor clears away banked-up earth with shovel in order to tow away wreck while Luney Construction employee uses jackhammer to split boulder.—(Robin Clarke photo.)

Fort Garry Lions Are BIG

A Striking Couple

Robert Stephens and bride of 45 minutes, Jean, were too late to register in Red Deer, Mr. and Mrs. Bowl-

Looking at Fort Garry Lions, you have a hard time believing they are a juvenile football team.

Lions, who play Farmer Construction today at 1:30 at Macdonald Park for the Little Grey Cup and the western Canada juvenile championship, are a big, big show. Pre-game rave notices from Winnipeg said they averaged 195 pounds on the defensive line and 180 pounds up front on offense, and the figure weren't exaggerated. They look more like juniors or intermediates than juveniles.

Yet talk to coach Garry Hobson for a few minutes and you get the impression that here is a club with more than mere size. Hobson is trying not to show too much confidence but here is a man obviously in love with his football team.

"We've got some kids that you're going to hear about in the pre-ranks in a year or so," Hobson said last night. "I don't see how they can miss."

Some of Hobson's boys have been together through midweek, bantam and juvenile football for six years. It is this experience, the size, and a tremendously fast backfield that made Lions the power of the Manitoba juvenile football league.

Keys to the offence are reportedly halfbacks John Poulti and Dave Wood. In Fort Garry they call them the "Touchdown Twins," and Hobson is one of their biggest admirers.

"Poulti is a track man," Hobson said. "And he can run 100 yards in 10 seconds in football gear. He scored 15 touchdowns. Wood is maybe a half-step slower, fast enough that he is a Canadian speed skating champion over 230 yards."

At the start of the year we got our touchdowns on the wide sweeps with Poulti and Wood carrying. But we've got power up the middle too, and we scored with it when the other teams spread their defences."

The Lions aren't just a scoring team. Perhaps the most interesting statistic of the lot is in the pass defence figures. All balance can topple the visitors. Lions won 10 games and lost one during regular league play. In that time opposing teams completed a total of 13 passes against them, and the Lions intercepted 19.

Add to that lineup a fellow like Howie Goss, centre, line backer and the league's most valuable player, and you have yourself quite an impressive juvenile team.

Hobson is proud of his club and although he won't say it, he'll be a very surprised football coach if his Lions don't get victory No. 11 today.

But Farmers don't impress store for the Lions.

Seals Shut Out Calgary, 4-0 Before 7,900 Home Rooters

San Francisco Seals have only six victories in 17 Western Hockey League games this season. Their latest 4-0 shutout last night over Calgary Stampede, was the most impressive.

Almost 7,900 fans turned out to the Cow Palace in San Francisco last night and cheered goalie Bev Bentley as he made 35 stops in posting his first shutout.

Meanwhile, San Francisco forwards made it uncomfortable for Calgary goalies Ed had on their scoring pants last night. They walloped Vancouver Canucks, 5-1, in Vancouver with winger Tommy McVie scoring three goals.

Other Portland goals were scored by Doug Anderson, acquired earlier in the week in a trade with Los Angeles, Arnie Schmautz, Art Jones, Arlo Goodwin and Ron Matthews.

BIGGEST NIGHT

Gene Achymichuk, McVie's linemate, had his biggest night of the season with five assists.

Dave Duke scored his 11th and 12th goals of the season to account for half the Vancouver total. Ron Hutchinson and Wally Chevrier scored other goals.

GOOD TRIP

Edmonton Flyers, nearing the end of a successful road trip, got a third-period goal from Keith Walsh to break up a tie and give them a 4-3 victory in Seattle.

Len (Comet) Haley scored twice for Edmonton and Chuck Holmes accounted for their other goal on a rebound.

Guyle Fielder, Bill MacFarland and Gordie Sinclair were the Seattle marksmen.

Steel Fence Around Turf At CNE Park
TORONTO (CP) — The heavy-gauge steel fence that protects spectators during stock-car meets has reappeared at Toronto's Exhibition Stadium, site of the Dec. 2 Grey Cup game.

It isn't there to prevent the paying customers from being hit by a flying ball-carrier. It's intended to keep non-combatants away from the playing area.

The fence went up as a precautionary measure as a result of an incident during last year's final in Vancouver, which had to be curtailed 41 seconds early because officials were unable to clear the field of spectators.

Plan Your Strategy Right at First Rock

By KEN WATSON
Telegraph News Service

One of the most perplexing problems confronting modern curlers is the plan of the lead man's first rock not only on the first end but in any frame. Dozens of letters have reached me, desk all devoted to this vexatious question.

The answer must depend on (1) the end, (2) the score, (3) the ice, (4) the players and by far the most important, (5) the defensive or offensive attitude of the skip.

LONG WALK
Let's assume you are that skip. It is the first end. You and your opposing skip are taking that long walk down to the other end of the ice. After reaching the far end you nonchalantly turn around hoping your third man has won the toss and the other lead is in the back. But to your consternation you realize it is your man who is ready to play.

What is your strategy? Do you immediately attack by signalling a draw to the house or do you pat the ice in front of the rings and order a guard?

WATCH FIRST END
Is there a difference? There sure is, mister! In the first instance you are starting an offensive action. You are telling the other skip by your call that you know he has last rock—so what! He is entitled to count one if he makes his final stone but if he fails... many a game has been lost on the first end.

Put the pressure on right from the opening gun. Keep the other fellow hitting. Remember it is much simpler during the first end to read the ice for draw weight than it is for take-outs. Hitting weight varies according to the keenness of the ice. The pebble provides a quandary for many curlers trying to hit during the early ends because it takes a few shots to get the feel of the ice.

In addition to gaining a psychological advantage by calling for a draw to the rings on the first end there are many other compensating factors.

First, the average lead man cannot brag about a high batting average. He is better at the draw—so why not make the most of it?

Let's suppose you ask him for a stone in front of the rings—then the opposing lead pulls one into the house. If you ask for a removal and get a miss—what has your master strategy gained? You will then be on the defensive hoping that your number two and vice-skip will get you off the hook with their efforts.

Chiefs Now Ready To Play Vikings

By KEVAN HULL

Reports that Haida Chiefs refuse to play Victoria University Vikings have been denied by Chiefs' coach, Neil Sprinkling. It would appear that this animosity was roused from the fact that Vikings had offered to play Chiefs about a month ago but the request was turned down. Asked why Chiefs did not want to play this game, coach Sprinkling said that his team had not held enough practices and was not ready for competition.

The Chiefs are now willing to play Vikings "any time." This is going to be rather difficult as coach Bill Garner points out that the Vikings have a full slate of exhibition games against American colleges. Vikings received a shock when they found that they were not going to play the preliminary game to tonight's Haida Chiefs vs. Alberni Athletics contest. Lloyd Henderson of the City Basketball Commission said the commission did not consider it fair to have a club out of the city leagues to play in a game when it would mean the exclusion of one of the city teams.

The Chiefs play only eight home games and have let the basketball commission arrange preliminary games. Vikings are excluded therefore as both men's and women's teams of city leagues will completely fill out these games. The Vikings were scheduled for games Jan. 13 and the junior Vikings Jan. 17.

Pressure exerted originally by the junior Vikings and First United has paid off as the commission has decided to drop the admission fee for players to their own games.

Last weekend saw hectic action on the campus when the so-called "Homecoming" was held. Prof. F. L. Martens termed the affair a success, in that there was a large number of teams and participants involved.

FEW CAME HOME
However, very few alumni teams or players were involved. The university clubs also were not very successful with only the hockey and soccer teams managing wins.

Initiated this year was a cross-country race which promises to become a permanent feature. Jeremy Long of Shawnigan Lake School was the winner of the four mile event in 21 minutes, 52 seconds. Following behind him were Bill Bland of Victoria High, Gary Kidson (unattached) and Eric Henry of university.

FINISHED FIRST
Victoria High finished first with 30 points just four ahead of Shawnigan Lake. Royal Roads placed third with 47 and university was a distant fourth with 77 points. Other institutions participating were Oak Bay High and Milnes Landing.

The girls grasshopper team played in the Evergreen Conference tournament last week in Pullman, Wash., and came home with a record of two wins and one loss.

Sue Dickinson scored three goals in the first game against Washington State U. as the girls won 5-1. Western Washington College was then shut out 3-0.

HARD BATTLE
The third game was a well-fought battle but U.B.C.'s Barb Lindberg scored the only goal with just three minutes remaining.

The golf button matches closed for the holidays last week on an exciting note. The only action was in the over-12 handicap division where Doug Wylie and Ron Smith had to battle right down to the last stroke to defeat challengers Bill Hobbs and Glen Crawford.

Result creates a three-way tie of two victories each among these two pairings and the Norm Isherwood-Peter Forte twosome.

Al McLeod and Barry Saunders are practically assured of year buttons as they have remained undefeated from the first round in the under-12 handicap division.

Brent Macnab Turns Coach

VERMILION, Alta. (CP)—Brent Macnab, former all-star defenceman and captain of the Western Hockey League Vancouver Canucks, Friday agreed to take over the coaching duties with Vermilion Tigers of the amateur Eastern Alberta Hockey League.

Macnab, who retired after last season and has rejected Vancouver efforts to return, will coach from the bench.

Argos 18 Points Ahead

Tiger-Cats Face Tough Task

HAMILTON (CP)—The fired-up Toronto Argonauts, who only a few weeks ago hardly were given a chance to get to the Grey Cup final, carry a formidable 18-point lead into the deciding game of the Eastern Football Conference final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats today.

The Argos, whose playoff surprise has come as a big surprise, clipped the claws of the league-leading Tiger-Cats with a 25-7 upset last Sunday and left Hamilton facing a supreme effort if the second encounter of the two-game total-point series.

Opinion is divided and the odds are all against them that they can overcome the margin. Weather conditions are expected to be as perfect for this time of the year. The weatherman has forecast mainly cloudy skies and a temperature of 45 degrees with no rain or snow. The southerly wind will range from 20 to 25 m.p.h.

HOME FIELD
The Tiger-Cats will have the advantage of their home field at Civic Stadium and the support of the vast majority of the near capacity crowd of around 27,000.

The game, starting at 11 a.m. (PST), will be televised over the CTV network of private stations in Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal and out west over the CBC's western network, (In Victoria, channels 2 and 6).

The winner of the series will play the western champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Grey Cup final in Toronto next Saturday. A Ham-Tor victory will send the Tiger-

Cats into the east-west classic for the fourth time in the last five years while a Toronto win will give them a chance at the Grey Cup for the first time since they won it in 1952.

BIG QUESTION

A Tiger-Cats' victory in today's game wouldn't be surprising. The big question is if they do it is whether the margin will be large enough to wipe out Argo's solid lead.

In the event the teams are tied in the total-point score at the end of the regulation 60 minutes, they will play 10-minute halves until a winner is decided.

Coach Jim Trimble of Tiger-

Cats definitely plans to play Hal Patterson, the brilliant pass-catching end. Patterson has been out of action for several weeks with a shoulder injury.

Guard Rail Wanted

Tug-of-war over danger to Craigflower Elementary School pupils using this narrow bridge over the Gorge at Admirals Road involves Saanich council and Greater Victoria school board. Council claims the 42-inch sidewalk is safe for children walking single file, despite huge logging trucks using 22-foot roadway. Trustees argue this is tacit admission of danger involved and reiterate municipality should install guard rail on the curb. Saanich share of costs for widening of bridge would be $3,000, the engineer estimates. (Colonist photo.)

Parents Rap Drills

Survival Issue Up to PTAs

By JACK FEY
Anger that civil defence survival drills will be carried out in Greater Victoria schools was voiced at last night's meeting of the Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council.

Mrs. R. K. Bloomfield, 1836 Falham, a member of the Gordon Head Elementary School PTA who brought up the issue, was ruled out of order because she was speaking her own views rather than those of her PTA, which has not yet discussed the matter.

She criticized an announcement Monday by the Greater Victoria school board that survival drills will start immediately and that a program of education on hazards of nuclear blasts should be instituted for all grades in the near future.

Horrors of nuclear warfare were to be toned down in the presentation. Mrs. Bloomfield gained support of two council delegates after unleashing a blistering attack against the school board's proposal.

"I as a parent would like to see what they propose before it's handed down to the schools," she said. "After it's put in and the children learn it, it's going to be too late. Is it possible for us to do anything through the PTA?" she asked.

Mrs. R. B. Restall, vice president of the council and chairman, advised her to approach her local PTA, because "all business that comes to this meeting should come from the associations."

THREE CHILDREN
Mrs. Lillian Money, representing McKenzie Avenue PTA, said: "I'm speaking as a parent of three children. I think PTAs should take this up in their organizations."

She said nuclear warfare "is not something children should be worrying about when they should be studying. They should be interested in peace and international understanding, not war."

Mrs. Louise Leeke, president of the Gordon Head Elementary School PTA, said she would bring the matter before the executive and later the general membership.

Charges Army

Lost Out on Pay Trainee Protests

By TED FULFORD
A national survival program trainee, stricken from the course rolls yesterday for medical reasons, has charged that the army offered to pay him only five days' wages for a full week's work.

He refused to accept the money. James Paul of 1248 Fort enrolled in the course several days before it began about three weeks ago. He was informed earlier in the week his service would be terminated Friday.

LAST DAY
Since Friday is the last day of classes for the week, Mr. Paul said, he assumed he would be paid for the entire week at the agreed rate of $40.

"This has happened to several men on the course," he charged, "but they have been short of money and so have accepted the cash given to them."

Mr. Paul, who is managing director of Western Home Guard Patrol in Victoria, told the army paymaster he would not accept the partial pay.

"Those of us who were stricken off strength today got $29.37 for a week's work. The men who will show up again Monday got $40 for a week's work."

FIVE DAYS
"I am complaining because it is high time the upper echelons of the army gave these men a square deal. They took their money even though they knew it wasn't enough. Somebody must stand up for them."

Mr. Paul took particular objection to the trimmed pay service because advertisements explaining the course had clearly stipulated $40 for a five-day work week.

"I worked the five days, I want the $40," he said. "It's the principle of the thing."

Officers in charge of the course admitted Mr. Paul had refused to take his money. "It may be that Mr. Paul has a point," Maj. R. H. Jorgensen said. "We have sent a memo on the matter to area headquarters."

14 Victorians in Running But Only One Is Official

Out of 14 persons who have announced they will contest the Dec. 14 city elections, only one has filed nomination papers.

He is John Warren Porteous, a 36-year-old accountant, who is seeking a seat on Greater Victoria school board to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of veteran trustee Kenneth Leeming.

Mr. Leeming also signed Mr. Porteous' papers, filed at city hall yesterday.

Mr. Porteous, 165 Joseph Street, has lived in Victoria with his wife and four children for five years.

David Logan, the other city representative on the school board whose term ends this year, has announced he will seek re-election.

Nominations close at 2 p.m. Dec. 7. For the first time in four years, the city voters' roll has shown a drop. The 1961 roll contains the names of 20,775 voters, fewer than last year.

Wurtele All Alone Oak Bay 'Short'

A check of nominations yesterday for the Dec. 7 municipal elections indicated struggles for reevehip in Saanich and Oak Bay and council seats in Saanich and Esquimalt.

Three reevehips and nine council seats are in the balance and candidates have only until noon Monday to file nomination papers.

In Esquimalt, Reeve A. C. Wurtele is unopposed. In Oak Bay there still is one fewer candidate for council than seats.

Nominations to date: SAANICH
Reeve—Coun. Stan Murphy, MLA John Tiedalle; council—Coun. Gregory Cook, Mira

Yarwood, Hugh A. Curtis, G. Stanley Eden, Capt. Harry Kingsley, Robert Ostler, Lionel Speller; school trustees—One seat district 61, incumbent Mrs. Frances M. Thompson, Richard B. Nixon. One seat district 63—nil.

OAK BAY
Reeve—Reeve George Murdoch, Coun. Gordon Elworthy, Jack Barracough; council—Incumbent Coun. Allan Cox, Walter Dordworth; school trustees—One seat, Peter G. Dunn.

ESQUIMALT
Reeve—Reeve A. C. Wurtele; council—All three incumbents, G. K. Sarmon, Walter Holder and C. A. Finkle, David H. Nelson, Peter F. Francis.

Candidate Stresses Library

The next Oak Bay council should give priority to consideration of a recreation centre with a library, Council member Elworthy, a candidate for reeve of the municipality, said last night.

Replying to a query from Mrs. F. W. Mantell in a recent letter to the Colonist, he said, "It is deplorable that many of our older citizens have to journey downtown to get a book."

New $400,000 classroom block will accommodate total of 850 Victoria University students next September. February start is expected on first major new building at Gordon Head—(Ryan Bros.)

Three Buildings—$3,000,000

Varsity Moves Closer To 'Historic Event'

Tenders will be called early in January for a $400,000 classroom block to accommodate 850 students on the new Gordon Head campus of Victoria University.

Construction is due to start early in February and the new block is expected to be ready for occupancy by September when the fall term opens.

R. B. Wilson, chairman of the university development board, said last night sod-turning ceremonies for the first major new building on the

Gordon Head campus will be an historic event in the life of the community.

The chairman said tenders also will be called early in 1962 on a student union building costing approximately $300,000 and a $2,000,000 science building.

More Jobs Here

Construction of three buildings with a total value of nearly $3,000,000 on the campus "should greatly assist in providing employment," said Mr. Wilson.

He added the classroom block is only the first step in a major university development program.

Architects designing the various buildings are working in close co-operation to ensure harmonious development of the Gordon Head campus.

They are being advised in the overall planning by the development board and faculty planning committee.

Mr. Wilson said: "Every effort has been made to design a functional campus that will allow efficient teaching and changing of classes." Development manager Floyd Fairclough said plans for a library at Gordon Head costing about $1,000,000 also are nearing completion.

Two Septembers

He said the student union building should be ready for occupancy by next September and the science building is scheduled for completion by September, 1963.

The new classroom block at Gordon Head is to have four floors including a basement with a total area of 30,000 square feet.

A curriculum library with accommodation for 100 students is located in the basement.

Classrooms for 695 students comprise the second and third floors.

The ground floor contains general offices, faculty lounge and two lecture rooms holding another 100 students.

The whole floor is surrounded by a glass-walled "discussion promenade" with plenty of grouped seating, officials said.

The building will be of reinforced concrete construction with pre-cast concrete panels.

Appeal to Public

Fight Private Sale Bus Drivers Ask

By JACK FEY

A Victoria street railwaymen's union official yesterday called for public opposition to any attempt by the provincial government to transfer the B.C. Electric transit system to private ownership.

There have been widespread rumors in Victoria of behind-the-scenes negotiations to sell the service to an unnamed U.S. interest.

BROKEN DOWN
Drivers here fear a private owner would "bleed" off thousands of dollars profit and then dump a broken-down system on the municipalities when his franchise expires.

David Dickinson, president of the 280-member Local 100, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railroad and Motor Coach Employees of America, said:

"We are strongly opposed to private ownership of the transportation company and we would ask for public backing to thwart any move by the government along these lines."

"We have enjoyed 56 years of union relationship with the B.C.E. We fought to preserve our rights in the past and we will do the same in the future if over the need arises."

He expressed deep concern about jobs, security and welfare of members of the local union.

"We're not too particular about who runs us, Greater Victoria or the provincial government, but we are concerned about the possibility a private owner could run the transit system into the ground."

"A private owner could bleed the system, take from it without putting anything into it, by not maintaining or adding to equipment which already exists, cutting service and laying off personnel."

Dangerous on Road Should 'Grow Up' Court Tells Driver

An Oak Bay motorist who pleaded guilty to charges of hit and run, careless driving and failing to file an accident report was given a total fine of $115 and a stern lecture when he appeared in police court yesterday.

Ross Richard Sharples, 2101 Neil, was told to "grow up" by Magistrate William Ostler.

The lecture came when a lawyer representing the accused appealed for no suspension of Sharples' driver's licence.

"He works in the Chemainus area as a carpenter's helper, and without a car he will find it hard to get employment," said the defence counsel.

"Unless he is going to grow up, he shouldn't be on the highway," said the magistrate after reviewing Sharples' driving record, which included three speeding offences.

"If you want to continue driving, you are going to have to mature," said the magistrate to Sharples.

A police officer testified the accused was sought for three weeks after the hit-and-run accident on Gorge Road shortly before midnight Oct. 23.

The officer said Sharples struck a parked car, then drove away and left his damaged car in the garage of a friend. It was found there by police three weeks later.

Damage to both cars totalled $375, said the officer. Sharples' lawyer told the court the accused had been unable to file an accident report because he had to return to Chemainus the following day.

Man, Boy Injured In Saanich Crashes

Separate traffic accidents late yesterday afternoon sent two people to hospital for treatment of minor injuries. Both accidents happened in Saanich.

At 5 p.m. Leonard Kersey, 9, of 3458 Bethune, suffered slight head injuries when his bicycle and a car collided at Seymour and Saanich Road. Driver of the car was Gordon H. Davies, 4796 Spring.

The boy was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital by Saanich fire department ambulance. He was treated and admitted for observation.

Heavy damage to two cars resulted from a crash at 5:40 p.m. at Douglas and Saanich.

Police said drivers were Percival G. Woods, 1072 Lodge, and Charles V. Stubbs, 1623 Cook. A police car took Mr. Woods, 49, to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where he was treated for head cuts and released.

Damage to the cars was estimated at $1,500.

EXPOSURE STORY: Photographer Bill Beacher drove all the way out to Jordan River the other day to get some shots.

On his way back he gave a lift to a woman and her son—a youngster who chattered away merrily for most of the trip back to town.

All of a sudden the chattering stopped.

"When a kid suddenly becomes silent, it means trouble," said Bill. He was 100 per cent right.

Looking around he saw the youngster had opened up all Bill's photo packs—exposing the film he had just taken.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a young matron, 27, with a fine husband and two small children. I shop at a neighborhood supermarket and the store is a great convenience, so please don't tell me to shop elsewhere.

A young fellow who works at the market (I'd guess him to be about 19) is overly friendly. Whenever I come in he greets me with a "personal attention." He once offered, half jokingly, to deliver my groceries during his lunch hour if I'd fix him a sandwich.

Yesterday he came up behind me and put his hands around my waist. I was so shocked I didn't know what to say. I don't want to report him because he may lose his job. What can I do?—MRS. DON'T KNOW.

Dear Mrs. D.: This fresh punk should be put in his place and don't hesitate for one minute to do it. The next time he puts his hands on you let him have it right in the corn-meal mush department. Make it clear if he doesn't stay over on his own side of the cash-register you'll report him to the manager. Then do it.

Dear Ann Landers: Next month our son is getting engaged to a nice girl. We've never met her parents, which is embarrassing because people are asking us questions about them and we don't know what to say.

Last week I asked Natalie to tell her folks we'd like to have them to dinner soon. The next evening she told me her folks would love to meet us but a dinner isn't necessary. They want to drop over just for a visit "at our convenience."

I am burned up about this. I think they want to look us over first and then decide if we're good enough to eat with. What is your opinion of all this? And please tell me what

Debutante Ball Last Evening at Empress Hotel

Beneath the glittering chandeliers of the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom last evening, fifteen young ladies were presented to the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, Major General The Honorable G. R. Pearkes, and Mrs. Pearkes.

The occasion was the United Services Institution Annual Ball, Victoria's Debutante Ball when daughters, relatives and young ladies sponsored by members of the USI make their formal bow to society.

Slightly nervous but radiantly excited, each debutante walked up the red carpet into the Ballroom, made her graceful bow before His Honor and Mrs. Pearkes, then was met by her escort. The young couple then took their place awaiting the moment when the last debutante had been presented, and the orchestra began to play for the debutantes waltz.

The young girls, in traditional white, carried Victorian bouquets of white carnations with either pink, yellow or red roses.

The ball, always one of the outstanding social events of the season, lived up to its reputation. Lovely ball gowns were worn by the feminine guests and the white gowns of the debutantes lent a special formality to the affair.

A princess gown of crystal nylon was worn by Miss Linda Andrew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Andrew. A charming V-neckline, front and back, was highlighted with shirring which extended over the shoulders. The bouffant skirt extended to a small train. She wore pearls, and a dainty tiara. Her escort was Cadet P. Dunn.

A dream gown of delicate white lace and organza was worn by Miss Jennifer Beeler, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Beeler. Cascading tiers of lace over organza formed the full, bouffant skirt and the fitted bodice had a lace bateau neckline and tiny sleeves. She wore a tiara. Mr. Stephen Burridge was Miss Beeler's escort.

SATIN BROCADE

Shimmering satin brocade made the outstanding Jacques Heim model chosen by Miss Sheila Bovey for her debut. Styled with scoop neckline and bell skirt, the front waistline featured a large bow. Pearls were her only jewelry. Miss Bovey is the daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. J. Bovey and was escorted to the ball by Mr. Peter Terry.

A gently-full skirt and princess line bodice were features of the white brocade presentation gown worn by dark-haired Miss Heather Bridgman, daughter of Mrs. M. A. W. Bridgman. The gown was fashioned with a scoop neckline with band that just touched at her shoulders. She wore pearl earrings. Mr. Tim Price was Miss Bridgman's escort for the ball.

A bouffant and filmy skirt of embroidered organza over taffeta drifted about Miss Susan Ann Brown at the ball

Escorts Were Nervous, Too

A group of very nervous, but very polished young men stood in line near the end of the red carpet last evening, awaiting their pleasant duty of escorting the debutantes away from the dais after their presentation.

last evening. The fair-haired debutante, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Brown, was charming in her portrait-collared gown. She wore pearl earrings, and a brilliant bracelet. Miss Brown's escort was Mr. Jim Saunders.

Miss Elaine Edgell's pretty gown of filmy white nylon organza was fashioned with fitted bodice, round neckline trimmed with rhinestones to match her earrings and full skirt with bow at the back waistline. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edgell, she was escorted to the ball by Mr. Frank Gibbons.

After the 15 debutantes had made their bows, the orchestra, led by Len Acres, played a waltz, especially for the debutantes and their partners. —(Photo by Ted Harris.)

Miss Eleanor Fiddick, straps, and a very full skirt. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fiddick, Nanaimo, wore an embroidered, embossed brocade gown fashioned with fitted bodice with tiny shoestring dick was escorted to the Ball by Mr. Raymond Nelson.

A charming gown of white brocade was worn by dainty Miss Sara Hughes, a vivacious brunette. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Walter Hughes, the young debutante wore with her simply-styled gown family jewelry, her grandmother's pearl brooch and crystal earrings. The gown was fashioned with oval front neckline and V at back, unpressed pleats in a bell skirt. Miss Hughes' escort was Mr. Charles Keple.

Miss Sharon Kirk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kirk, wore a stunning gown of white satin brocade. Styled with strapless bodice, a chiffon scarf was attached to the front of the bodice and draped over the shoulders to cross in the back to form floating panels. The skirt was silhouette in front and bouffant at the back. A rhinestone tiara and bracelet completed her ensemble. Mr. John Grant was Miss Kirk's escort.

Tall, fair-haired Miss Jennifer Lockyer wore for her presentation a classically-styled sheath gown of satin brocade with floor-length skirt, obi sash, square neckline and low back. Her jewelry was an antique gold and pearl necklace with matching earrings. Miss Lockyer's escort was Mr. Robert W. Boedway.

Dark haired Miss Maureen McAloney wore a beautiful gown of heavy French brocade fashioned with fitted, strapless bodice, the skirt straight in front and inverted soft pleats at the back. A string of portrait pearls and earrings and a gold bracelet set with amethysts and seed pearls was her jewelry. Daughter of Mrs. M. T. McAloney, she was escorted by Sub. Lieut. J. MacIntosh.

A gorgeous silk organza gown was worn by fair-haired Miss Sharon MacDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lew F. MacDonald. The very bouffant skirt of tiered lace in diagonal flounces was complemented by a fitted bodice with miniature scalloped scoop neckline, tiny sleeves and pleated back bodice. She wore rhinestone jewelry. Miss MacDonald's escort was Mr. David Wilson.

Parents and Friends Gather

Proud parents and friends gathered to chat in the lounge outside the Ballroom, and of course, the talk was of the lovely young debutantes, their stunning gowns, handsome escorts

aid's escort was Lieut. Bruce Plaxton.

Petite Miss Sandra Noble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Noble, wore a white brocade gown with full skirt falling gently into folds, a princess bodice accented with shirred tulle and a bow. She wore an heirloom pearl necklace sent to her from Scotland. Miss Noble's escort was Mr. William Fox.

Miss Virginia Price whose escort was Mr. David Wilson looked lovely in her gown of white tulle matelasse jacquard styled with scooped neckline, fitted bodice and bell skirt. Pearls set in stars on a gold chain was her only jewelry. Miss Price is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. H. E. C. Price.

Garden Notes

Don't Dig Wet Soil

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

In yesterday's notes on fall and winter digging, one point I forgot to mention is to stay off the ground in wet weather. There is nothing to be gained by digging soil when it is wet and soggy and, if its main constituent is sticky clay, it shouldn't even be walked on, much less dug over, for any traffic or other pressure will cause it to set hard like cement as it dries.

Frost is something else again and I see no harm at all in digging when there is a crust on the surface. Many garden books frown upon the practice of turning under slabs of frozen soil, claiming such buried chunks stay frozen late into spring, but I have never noticed any detrimental effects. Personally, I always welcome a hard frost for it provides a wonderful opportunity for getting the heavy-traffic jobs done, such as barrowing manure on to the plot, without churning up a lot of mud and puddling the surface.

Another job I "put on ice," so to speak, is the cutting of long grass in the wild parts of the garden and along the ditches. I don't have a scythe—I could never get the hang of using one of these implements properly—but I have a grass whip, used like a golf club, and the grass comes down with a beautifully satisfying "snick" when it is stiff with frost.

I have had several letters recently asking when is the best time of the year to apply lime to a lawn and how much to use. I suspect these correspondents are suffering from an invasion of moss on the lawn; somewhere along the line they have picked up the idea that lime will correct this condition.

There is rarely, if ever, any reason or excuse for spreading lime on a lawn. While a farmer will lime his pastures to encourage the growth of forage grasses, the finer, dwarfier grass varieties that make up a good lawn prefer an acid soil. Lime encourages the coarse grasses at the expense of the desirable kinds; lime has a tendency to make the lawn a more attractive proposition for earthworms and their wormcasts and is often followed by a full-scale invasion of clover.

These folks with mossy lawns are confusing a sour soil with an acid condition. The two terms may be synonymous in the case of upset stomachs—as you can see, I am an avid follower of TV commercials—but in soil, the two conditions are entirely different. A sour soil—the most common cause of moss—is one lacking air, and the treatment is aeration and better drainage, not lime.

Another common point of confusion is the storage of houseplant bulbs during their winter period of dormancy. Because gladioli, begonia and dahlia tubers require cool storage to hold them back and prevent premature sprouting, a lot of folks jump to the conclusion that houseplant bulbs should also be stored cool. This is all wrong and I suspect quite a lot of gladioli trouble arises from the chilling of the bulbs in storage.

These bulbs are all tropical subjects and require about the same temperature range when dormant as they would enjoy in their native lands. Gladioli and gesnerias should be stored at 55 to 60 degrees—ordinary room temperatures will do—while achimenes and the yellow calla like it a trifle cooler, 45 to 50 degrees.

A common cause of excess shrivelling is drying off the plant too abruptly as the time for dormancy approaches, or cutting down the top-growth before it is dead and dry. The easiest way to store—and the safest—is simply to leave the bulbs in their pots of soil until it is time to shake them out and repot.

Good Will Tires French

PARIS—Besides everything else, President de Gaulle has to think about, he is constantly hounded by state drop in on him for so-called "good-will visits." There was a time a few years ago when it took the Queen of England, the President of the United States, or the Premier of Russia before the French would decorate the city of Paris with flags and give the visitors the full treatment. But now it doesn't make any difference who comes to Paris—if you're the head of state, any state, you get the works, which means flags on the Champs-Elysees, dinner with Gen. de Gaulle, a ride up to the Arc de Triomphe with all traffic at a halt, a 21-gun salute, and a special performance at the Opera or Comedie Francaise.

Not only are these trips costly, but they're getting on the nerves of the French, whose good will has always been at a minimum anyway.

Take the recent visit of the Shah of Iran. Before the Shah came to Paris on a good-will visit, the French, if they thought about him at all, believed he was a nice chap, good looking, obviously rich, and a good picker of beautiful wives. They knew his present wife shopped at Christian Dior, which always means a lot to a Frenchman, and that his former wife couldn't produce a male heir, which always makes a Frenchman very sad.

Therefore we could say the Shah of Iran had a certain amount of good will among the Parisians before he came.

But when he arrived, the flags went up, the Garde Republicaine turned out, the cannon were shot off, and there were traffic jams all over the city.

Taxi drivers used the name of the Shah in vain, husbands who couldn't get home to their cassoulet turned against Iran overnight, people on Paris buses started to discuss how to overthrow the Persian throne. In just three days every bit of good will was used up, and it will be a long time between good-will visits before the French will forgive the Shah for coming to Paris.

Almost every week a President of a new African republic shows up in Paris and the scene is repeated.

The countries are so new that sometimes the flags are flown upside down. Other times they're flown sideways. No one seems to notice until the African President takes his drive up the Champs-Elysees. Then he's horrified, insulted, and the French have to give him even more money than he asked for to make up for the mistake.

What can be done to make good-will visits a matter of good will again? Raymond Loewy, the industrial designer, has been studying the problem and he thinks he has come up with some ideas.

He thinks the French could save money on the cost of the flags by having zippers on the different colors. Then instead of making new flags for each state visit, the colors could be zipped together to correspond with the colors of the flag.

The French should refurbish a Metro car with Louis XIV furniture, a bar, a salon, and if need be a bedroom. Then the head of state could go from one function to another on the subway, which is not only faster but much safer.

As a farewell gift President de Gaulle could give the head of state a set of 8-mm. movies of the places in Paris he didn't get to see, to look at when he gets back home.

Adlai Beats 'Night Beat'

"There are two things which make this series what it is and two things which make it different from all other public affairs programs—and they are Stevenson and me," said Arnold Michaelis, the host and producer of "Adlai Stevenson Reports," a television show on ABC-TV. Michaelis, as you may gather from the statement, is not lacking in self-esteem.

It's a discussion program. "We have only Mr. Stevenson, myself, and a guest," said you know who. "We don't have the problem of officialdom as they do on 'Meet the Press.' We are not interested in the office of the human being as much as the human being who is in office, his philosophies and ideas. The office itself is often circumscribed by history," said Michaelis, who talks like this all the time. "It is the way individuals behave in office that is vitally important."

"We try to report the reflexes, the responses to what is going on and what has gone on in informal robes of conversation. There are no such things as questions—his or mine."

Only areas which we agree on we discuss, and it becomes my function to know as much about the subjects as I can. I'm a kind of conversational catalyst. I try to use my knowledge of their background and use it in a personalized way.

"I'm not interested in controversy. Other programs thrive on it. We are interested in pursuing a conversational approach to many of the problems happening in the world and we do so in the hope we can find some new pathways. People are no longer interested in the 'Night Beat' approach," says Michaelis with overwhelming assertiveness.

"Some years ago 'Night Beat' was all they wanted, and I was just a still small voice." I find it difficult to believe Mr. Michaelis was ever a still small voice. "The records I made doing interviews with such people as Bruno Walter, were pallid in comparison with the sensationalism of the 'Night Beat' approach. But now there is an increasing audience of people who are interested in exploring the motivations, reflexes, and philosophy of people in the news." Mr. Michaelis considers his program a real breakthrough in the public affairs area because it's the first time a network has used an outside package program in the public affairs area. A few years ago, he did a film on Nehru. He was outraged that no network would put it on.

"I feel that the networks have a responsibility to the citizens of this country to consider the work done by those people outside the networks. If they don't, I consider it an infringement on the right of the public to participate, and to see programs of this calibre." Naturally, Michaelis feels the film of Nehru was of high calibre because—well, he made it.

Right now he's working on another series to help us explore some facets of ourselves called "The Language of Common Experience." Still in the planning stage, it'll deal with those experiences all over the globe which become magnified into world problems. "We will put the large things through the other end of the telescope and thus relate them in terms of every day language," he says.

Labor Says No

Are Canadian Workers Too Lazy?

By FRANK DREA
Telegram News Service

Although it seldom gets public recognition, an increasingly popular theory on the real reasons for high unemployment is that Canadian workers have become too lazy for the age of technology.

This hard-nose theory is becoming popular around dinner and coffee tables because it offers a quick solution to the complex problem of unemployment.

And, as labor spokesman Murray Cotterill frequently points out, such a theory is inevitable in times of economic stress.

"In the depression, the people with jobs thought people out of work were bums," he explained. "Today, the people with jobs still think so."

The Canadian Labor Congress research staff has devoted some space in its latest analysis of unemployment to refuting the laziness theory.

"At least it enjoys the respectability of age," notes the CLC publication Labor Research. "It used to be put forward in the great depression and has cropped up in every post-war recession. It is a striking example of the survival of the unfittest—for a moment's rational examination of the evidence is enough to demonstrate absurdity."

From 1956 (200,000 jobless) to 1960 (448,000), unemployment more than doubled as the work force increased by 600,000 men and women.

"Does anyone in his senses seriously believe that in those four years a great tidal wave of laziness engulfed a quarter of a million of our workers?

Not Enough Jobs

"Did a quarter of a million who had jobs four years before suffer a moral collapse or were a quarter of a million of new entrants, natives and immigrants—well over a third of all new entrants, just loafers and good-for-nothings?" asked the labor publication.

The labor group concedes there have always been people who "won't work" and there always will be, but hardly on the scale of one-third to one-half of the newcomers over a four-year period.

But the impact of technology on employment is underlined in an analysis of the production and employment in 16 industries between 1949 and 1959.

Four of the 16 showed substantial production gains alongside substantial employment cuts. Most spectacular gains were in tobacco where production jumped 80 per cent while the number of jobs dropped four per cent.

"There haven't been enough new jobs to go around and what new jobs there were were often very different from the old ones," the report said.

"The jobs and the workers don't match."

The report adds some industries, that had been growing fast enough to absorb thousands of young workers, no longer need new labor.

"Nobody perhaps is being laid off but a lot of young people who might normally have expected to be taken on haven't a chance."

15 COMING EVENTS

EVERY GAME PAYS

AT LEAST $20

and since you pay 10 cents for each game, that's a minimum of $20 in prizes for you. BUT—over

100 prizes are available each week. So you can win big money every week. This is the only game in the world that pays you every time you play. And it's so easy to play that even children can play it. So come and see for yourself. You'll be amazed at the prizes you can

win. And you'll be glad to pay 10 cents for each game. So come and see for yourself. You'll be amazed at the prizes you can

win. And you'll be glad to pay 10 cents for each game. So come and see for yourself. You'll be amazed at the prizes you can

win. And you'll be glad to pay 10 cents for each game. So

Oakalla Hospital Firetrap Punishment Area Dungeon

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Green, son of Canada's External Affairs Minister Howard Green, said yesterday he was "shocked" at what he saw in a tour of the provincially-operated Oakalla Prison Farm in Burnaby.

In a bylined article published in a Vancouver newspaper, Mr. Green said, "Some of the things I found or was told about by the staff" included:

LIKE FIRE TRAP

Tuberculosis prisoners are kept in a cell block because they must be isolated; the prison hospital comprises two jam-packed floors and looks like a firetrap; the hospital at times is crowded with double-tier bunks and mentally-disturbed patients are "crowded into the two hospital floors along with other patients."

Mr. Green, publisher of the Agassiz-Harrison Advance, a weekly paper, wrote that the punishment section of the prison "is politely called the elementary training unit . . . the staff refers to it among themselves as 'The Hole.' Dungeon would be a more fitting word."

He added prisoners in the punishment unit live in small cells with no furniture. Some of the beds have mattresses, some don't and "open buckets are used as toilets."

NOT REQUIRED

The paper in a foreword to the article, said Mr. Green toured the prison without the knowledge of prison officials. In the same edition it quotes Attorney-General Bonner as refusing permission for a reporter to tour Oakalla because "prisoners are not required to serve their sentences under the scrutiny of the press."

The attorney general, commenting on Mr. Green's article, said that Oakalla prison hospital facilities cannot be improved until money is available.

Asked if he believed there was overcrowding at Oakalla, he said the prisoner count was high—higher than at the same time last year.

Queen's Reception In Ghana Visit A Sad Farewell?

By DOUG MAERHALL
Canadian Press

Beneath the joy and affection with which the tumultuous throngs greeted the Queen in Ghana British correspondents detect an alien sound of melancholy.

One question they have been seriously asking themselves is whether the spontaneous demonstrations and tributes were a political hail of farewell.

Some pessimistic Britons believe that despite the tour—the most successful in post-war history—Ghana may leave the Commonwealth in a few months.

Others admit the future of Ghana's relations with Britain and the West still hangs dangerously in balance.

The pivot on which these decisions rest still remains the unpredictable and enigmatic figure of President Nkrumah himself.

Most correspondents agree that, politically speaking, one of the few positive results of the tour was to raise Nkrumah's sagging prestige.

Among the chief points brought up by observers are the clear rifts in the foreign policy between Britain and Ghana, evidence of economic crisis behind Ghana's prestige window-dressing, signs of a volatile struggle for power in Nkrumah's government and seeds of suspicion sown by press criticism on both sides.

Patrick O'Donovan, writing in the London Observer, says the royal tour has failed to provide a basis of understanding between a Ghana that sees everything in terms of African ambitions and grievances and a Britain still tinged with imperialism.

O'Donovan and other observers see Ghana moving toward a highly centralized and directed socialism sought by the militant left-wing ministers around Nkrumah.

Another view is the tour has demonstrated the immense hold which Britain and the Queen have on the people's affections in Ghana, a hold which swung the government-controlled press around from crude abuse to recognition of the Queen as the greatest socialist monarch.

'In Case of Blast —Follow Orders'

LONDON (UPI) — The Evening Standard said in an editorial column yesterday the Canadian Army has issued these orders telling a soldier what to do if he sees a nuclear bomb explode:

"The soldier will inform his immediate superior and tell him what has occurred. If the bomb goes off in duty hours a certain number will be called. If it is during off-duty hours an alternate number will be called.

"The soldier then will fill out the appropriate report form and dispatch it forthwith to headquarters."

(In Ottawa, an Army spokesman said such orders would have originated with Canada's NATO brigade in West Germany. He said he could not confirm their accuracy.)

Antarctica Find

Bacteria Still Alive After 50 Years in Ice

MCMURDO SOUND, Antarctica (AP) — The discovery of living bacteria left in Antarctica by the famed Scott and Shackleton expeditions of nearly 50 years ago was reported here.

The bacteria, which apparently survived by literally feeding on their own tissue while locked in the frozen grip of this strange continent, may have taught scientists at least one new lesson about the nature of bacteria in general, their discoverer said.

Intestinal organisms were found frozen, but still with life in them, in human solid waste retrieved from outhouse receptacles used by the explorers.

The recovered organisms, still in a dormant state, were placed in laboratory culture material and caused to multiply, said George Meyer, microbiologist of the University of Texas. Meyer is one of 200 scientists doing research in the Antarctic under sponsorship of the United States National Science Foundation.

Jury Finds Negligence

CLOVERDALE (CP) — A coroner's jury Wednesday found a crane was being over-worked at the Port Mann bridge site at the time it toppled Oct. 5 killing bridge worker Inge Mellen, 38. It found the bridge contracting company, Perini-Pacific, had been negligent. The jury recommended stricter Workmen's Compensation Board regulations.

Island Cider For the Birds

NANAIMO — The word around Harewood residential district is that cider is for the birds.

Their guidance systems impaired by fermented apples found on the ground, local birds have taken to trying to fly through closed windows. Amateur ornithologists report the fumes are thrushes—robins.

Ship Washed Into Town

REYKJAVIK (AP)—Giant waves washed a 50-ton ship into the middle of a town Friday in Iceland's worst north coast storm in 60 years.

Gales, snow blizzards and rising seas caused widespread damage and claimed at least two lives.

The ship grounded in mid-town at Olafsdjorur.

U.S. Fleet

Ships Hailed As Bulwark

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The Dominican Republic declared yesterday it welcomed the presence of United States warships off its shores as a bulwark against any attempt at invasion by Cuba or other Communist countries.

"Blessed be the moment that the United States fleet came into our waters," Dominican delegate Jose Antonio Bonilla Atiles told the United Nations Security Council.

Bonilla Atiles, who said he was a member of an opposition party in his country, and Dominican Ambassador Carlos Sanchez y Sanchez both denied Cuban charges U.S. warships and planes had violated Dominican territorial waters.

Mario Garcia-Inchaustegui, the Cuban delegate, reiterated demands the council condemn the United States as an aggressor and call for withdrawal of U.S. ships from the area.

Most diplomats believe it will merely take note of statements made, and wind up debate without taking any action on the Cuban complaint.

Aircraft-Aid Chain Expanding in B.C.

Surveyors are busy on Agate Mountain, near Princeton, on another step in the department of transport's plan to establish a Canada-wide chain of high-frequency radio navigation aids for aircraft.

The facility will be similar to those already installed at Vancouver and Sandspit Airports. Others will be located at Victoria, Port Hardy, Enderby, Carmi and Kimberley.

The Agate installation, to be built about the 2,200-foot level, will include a concrete equipment building as well as an all-weather road and powerline to the site.

Slated for completion in 1962, the project will cost about $370,000.

Town 'Fatal'

Menhennett's ex-wife Alma, 50, went to court yesterday to claim possession of the hut and seek an eviction order against her husband, who finally divorced her last year.

"He went down that garden five years ago and he is still there," she said. "It is not very nice having him around and I feel I want to get the place tidied up and to have some peace of mind."

Menhennett, who gave his address as the "hut in the bottom of the garden," said he had papered and carpeted the hut and had electricity put in. He said he wanted to go on living there.

The judge adjourned the case until the first of next year, observing: "This gentleman has been living in the hut for so long that a little more time won't affect him unduly."

PORT ALBERNI—A young logger described by a probation officer as a good worker who only got into trouble when he came to town was sentenced to 30 days when he pleaded guilty in Port Alberni court to two charges of passing worthless cheques.

Daryl Leonard Walker admitted writing cheques for a total value of $25 on an account which had been closed. Probation officer K. M. Richardson said Walker is still on suspended sentence with probation as the result of a previous offence.

Magistrate W. E. MacLeod ordered a 30-day sentence on each of the two charges, the sentences to run concurrently.

'Black Partner' Enrages Boers

PORT ELIZABETH (Reuters)—The local South African nationalist newspaper Die Oos-terlig says it was "scandalous" that Queen Elizabeth danced with President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana during her visit to the West African nation.

In a front-page article headed "her black dancing partners" the newspaper refers to a picture on another page of the Queen dancing the "high life" with Nkrumah.

GLAD LINK GONE

"An Afrikaans-speaking person with his deep-rooted color feeling must not be blamed if he is disgusted at the spectacle of the British Queen on the dance floor with a black dictator of Africa," it said.

"It is just as well that we in South Africa are no longer linked with a Commonwealth where such things are becoming the fashion to an increasing extent," it added.

Die Oos-terlig notes that according to reports: "They enjoyed it at the same time. The prince consort, Prince Philip, waved with a happy laugh and danced the same dance with Mrs. Nkrumah."

"ABOMINABLE"

"This spectacle of the honored head of the once-mighty British Empire dancing with black natives of Pagan Africa is extremely scandalous and abominable for more than just Afrikaners."

"Trumpeting forth that the Queen apparently enjoys it is just as bad."

Dancing Session

Fownhope Club will hold a special ballroom dancing session at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Lee, 18 Wellington, at 8 p.m. today. Music will be provided by Gunda Duerichen, refreshments will be served.

Merchants Bilked Of $1,000

NANAIMO — Police are checking an outbreak of worthless cheque cashing which already has swindled city merchants of more than $1,000. Officers are seeking two young men dressed in work clothes who have been cashing what would appear to be company pay cheques—but which turn out to be forged.

Slouching Teen-Age Boy Snickers at His Crimes

NANAIMO (CP)—A 15-year-old boy has been sent to prison for 20 months for three burglaries.

The lad, who was transferred from juvenile court to police court, snickered as he pleaded guilty before Magistrate Lionel Beever Potts to breaking into three homes. The burglaries netted a radio, jewelry, two blankets and some $5 in cash.

"How would you like to be sent to the penitentiary for the rest of your life?" the magistrate asked. "I can do that, you know."

The boy replied that it would not bother him.

During the court proceedings the lad slouched in his seat.

The magistrate told the boy had an unhappy background, said he would recommend that the 20-month term be served in the Haney correctional institution.

Americans Doubt Five-Mill Rate In Columbia River Power Sale

Top American power experts yesterday applauded the possible ending of the Victoria-Ottawa stalemate on Columbia River development but added they did not think there was a market for five-mill power in the U.S.

Meanwhile it was learned that last week in Seattle Premier Bennett had a lengthy discussion on the possible sale of Canadian power in the U.S. with Kinsey Robinson of the Washington Waterpower Co., chief spokesman for private power interests in the Pacific Northwest.

NO COMMENT

Mr. Robinson said yesterday he did not wish to comment, although he admitted a meeting had been held.

Premier Bennett, who also met with President Kennedy, said on his return from Seattle he was "more confident than ever" B.C. power could be sold for five mills.

NO MARKET

Commented one American official yesterday: "There is no market here for five-mill power."

Said another: "The price will probably be closer to 3.7 mills in his (Premier Bennett's) pocket once wheeling and transmission charges have been paid."

The officials, mindful of

Likely End of Fued Hailed

Ottawa's displeasure that Premier Bennett had conferred directly with President Kennedy on the subject, asked their names not be used.

"We don't want to upset the applecart," said one. The officials were gleeful, however, that Premier Bennett had declared B.C. will agree to the long-stalled Canadian ratification of the Columbia treaty as soon as a provincial water licence is issued, probably about February.

TREATY DEADLINE

Earlier they had stated that March should be considered a reasonable deadline for Canadian ratification of the treaty.

"We have to start some construction soon to stop this disastrous flooding which occurs every year," said a U.S. spokesman. "I think the treaty is a wonderful thing for both of our countries."

"But when an American statement doesn't fit it becomes an international incident," said Mr. Bonner.

Liquor Board Staff Wins Pension Boost

Employees of the B.C. Liquor Control Board will receive a general increase in superannuation payments, Col. Donald McGugan, board chairman, announced yesterday.

The increase follows extensive investigations over several months and will be effective Aug. 1, 1961.

Approximately 750 board employees have been brought within the scope of the Civil Service Superannuation Act. The announcement stated no employee would be adversely affected and there will be substantial increases all round, especially among those with long service.

Pensions will be increased in nearly all cases.

Col. McGugan also said those already retired will have their pensions brought up to present civil service levels.

Superannuation commissioner Howard Forrest said the benefits include pensions for the widows of employees who die in service, higher benefits for early retirement and an increase in disability payments.

Heck of a Wreck

Jackhammers, dynamite and shovels were needed to clear wreckage after this driverless five-ton Evans Coleman and Evans dump truck loaded with 1,000-pound boulder slid on ice on private driveway (centre of picture), slipped its brakes and travelled 50 feet before crashing into 30-foot mountain ash tree outside home of Mrs. F. L. Fallis, 1330 Bond. Truck, being used to haul away rocks from a Luney Construction excavation, was unattended. After clipping tree, weight of boulder dug truck's nose into dirt. Sudden halt tipped boulder from back and it ripped off left hand door as it fell, smashing sidewalk. Both wheels of truck snapped off, one rolling 180 feet before hitting front steps at 1319 Bond. Victoria Auto Wreckers tow truck driver Verne Amor clears away banked-up earth with shovel in order to tow away wreck while Luney Construction employee uses jackhammer to split boulder.—(Robin Clarke photo.)

Transport Agency Coming?

OTTAWA (CP) — A new national transport tribunal may be established to advise the federal cabinet on policy decisions involving all forms of transportation in Canada.

Through research and planning, the tribunal would act as a federal advisory body and would help hammer out overall national policies for rail, road, water, air and pipeline transportation.

A proposal along these lines may emerge as one of the key recommendations in the second MacPherson royal commission report on transportation, to be delivered soon to Prime Minister Diefenbaker. In its first report, last April, the commission indicated a need for some such agency.

Guard Rail Wanted

Tug-of-war over danger to Craigflower Elementary School pupils using this narrow bridge over the Gorge at Admirals Road involves Saanich council and Greater Victoria school board. Council claims the 42-inch sidewalk is safe for children walking single file, despite huge logging trucks using 22-foot roadway. Trustees argue this is tacit admission of danger involved and reiterate municipality should install guard rail on the curb. Saanich share of costs for widening of bridge would be $3,000, the engineer estimates. (Colonist photo.)

Survival Issue Up to PTAs

By JACK FREY

Anger that civil defence survival drills will be carried out in Greater Victoria schools was voiced at last night's meeting of the Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council.

Mrs. R. K. Bloomfield, 1836 Feltham, a member of the Gordon Head Elementary School PTA who brought up the issue, was ruled out of order because she was speaking her own views rather than those of her PTA, which has not yet discussed the matter.

She criticized an announcement Monday by the Greater Victoria school board that survival drills will start immediately and that a program of education on hazards of nuclear blasts should be instituted for all grades in the near future.

Horrors of nuclear warfare were to be toned down in the presentation. Mrs. Bloomfield gained support of two council delegates after unleashing a blistering attack against the school board's proposal.

WILL BE TOO LATE
"As a parent would like to see what they propose before it's handed down to the schools," she said. "After it's put in and the children learn it, it's going to be too late."

"Is it possible for us to do anything through the PTA?" she asked.

Mrs. R. B. Restall, vice-president of the council and chairman, advised her to approach her local PTA, because "all business that comes to this meeting should come from the associations."

THREE CHILDREN
Mrs. Lillian Money, representing McKenzie Avenue PTA, said: "I'm speaking as a parent of three children. I think PTAs should take this up in their organizations."

She said nuclear warfare "is not something children should be worrying about when they should be studying. They should be interested in peace and international understanding, not war."

BEFORE EXECUTIVE
Mrs. Louise Leake, president of the Gordon Head Elementary School PTA, said she would bring the matter before the executive and later the general membership.

Candidate Stresses Library

The next Oak Bay council should give priority to consideration of a recreation centre with a library, Coun. Gordon Elworthy, a candidate for reeve of the municipality, said last night.

Replying to a query from Mrs. F. W. Mantell in a recent letter to the Colonist, he said, "It is deplorable that many of our older citizens have to journey downtown to get a book."

Three Buildings—$3,000,000

Varsity Moves Closer To 'Historic Event'

Tenders will be called early in January for a $400,000 classroom block to accommodate 850 students on the new Gordon Head campus of Victoria University.

Construction is due to start early in February and the new block is expected to be ready for occupancy by September when the fall term opens.

R. B. Wilson, chairman of the university development board, said last night at a turning ceremony for the first major new building on the

Gordon Head campus will be an historic event in the life of the community.

The chairman said tenders also will be called early in 1962 on a student union building costing approximately $300,000 and a $2,000,000 science building.

More Jobs Here

Construction of three buildings with a total value of nearly $3,000,000 on the campus should greatly assist in providing employment, said Mr. Wilson. He added the classroom block is only the first step in a major university development program.

Architects designing the various buildings are working in close co-operation to ensure harmonious development of the Gordon Head campus.

They are being advised in the over-all planning by the development board and faculty planning committee.

Mr. Wilson said: "Every effort has been made to design a functional campus that will allow efficient teaching and changing of classes."

Development manager Floyd Fairclough said plans for a library at Gordon Head costing about $1,000,000 also are nearing completion.

Two Septembers

He said the student union building should be ready for occupancy by next September and the science building is scheduled for completion by September, 1963.

The new classroom block at Gordon Head is to have four floors including a basement with a total area of 30,000 square feet.

A curriculum library with accommodation for 100 students is located in the basement. Classrooms for 600 students comprise the second and third floors.

The ground floor contains general offices, faculty lounge and two lecture rooms holding another 160 students. The whole floor is surrounded by a glass-walled "discussion promenade" with plenty of grouped seating, officials said.

The building will be of reinforced concrete construction with pre-cast concrete panels.

Appeal to Public

Fight Private Sale Bus Drivers Ask

By JACK FREY

A Victoria street railwaymen's union official yesterday called for public opposition to any attempt by the provincial government to transfer the B.C. Electric transit system to private ownership.

There have been widespread rumors in Victoria of behind-the-scenes negotiations to sell the service to an unnamed U.S. interest.

BEHIND-SCENES
Drivers here fear a private owner could "bleed" off thousands of dollars profit and then dump a broken-down system on the municipalities when his franchise expires.

David Dickinson, president of the 280-member Local 100, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railroad and Motor Coach Employees of America, said:

PUBLIC BACKING
"We are strongly opposed to private ownership of the transportation company and we would ask for public backing to thwart any move by the government along these lines."

"We have enjoyed 56 years of union relationship with the B.C.E. We fought to preserve our rights in the past and we will do the same in the future if ever the need arises."

He expressed deep concern about jobs, security and welfare of members of the local.

"We're not too particular about who runs us. Greater Victoria or the provincial government, but we are concerned about the possibility a private owner could run the transit system into the ground."

"A private owner could bleed the system, take from it without putting anything into it."

Dangerous on Road Should 'Grow Up' Court Tells Driver

An Oak Bay motorist who pleaded guilty to charges of hit and run, careless driving and failing to file an accident report was given a total fine of $115 and a stern lecture when he appeared in police court yesterday.

Ross Richard Sharples, 2101 Neil, was told to "grow up" by Magistrate William Ostler.

The lecture came when a lawyer representing the accused appealed for no suspension of Sharples' driver's licence.

"He works in the Chemainus area as a carpenter's helper, and without a car he will find it hard to get employment," said the defence counsel.

"Unless he is going to grow up, he shouldn't be on the highway... he's dangerous on the road," said the magistrate after reviewing Sharples' driving record, which included three speeding offences.

"If you want to continue driving, you are going to have to mature," said the magistrate to Sharples.

A police officer testified the accused was sought for three weeks after the hit-and-run accident on Gorge Road shortly before midnight Oct. 28.

The officer said Sharples struck a parked car, then drove away and left his damaged car in the garage of a friend. It was found there by police three weeks later.

Damage to both cars totalled $375, said the officer.

Sharples' lawyer told the court the accused had been unable to file an accident report because he had to return to Chemainus the following day.

Man, Boy Injured In Saanich Crashes

Separate traffic accidents late yesterday afternoon sent two people to hospital for treatment of minor injuries. Both accidents happened in Saanich.

At 5 p.m. Leonard Kersey, 9, of 3458 Bethune, suffered slight head injuries when his bicycle and a car collided at Seymour and Saanich Roads. Driver of the car was Gordon H. Davies, 4798 Spring.

The boy was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital by Saanich fire department ambulances. He was treated and admitted for observation.

Heavy damage to two cars resulted from a crash at 5:40 p.m. at Douglas and Saanich.

Police said drivers were Percival G. Woods, 1072 Lodge, and Charles V. Stubbs, 1623 Cook. A police car took Mr. Woods, 49, to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where he was treated for head cuts and released.

Damage to the cars was estimated at $1,500.

Losing a Chance for Votes Chemainus Candidates Told

By KLAUS MUENTER
DUNCAN — Duncan Jaycees are proceeding with plans for an all-candidate civic forum Nov. 29 despite an expected boycott of the meeting by the Chemainus Ratepayers' Association.

The association publicly snubbed the Jaycee program recently when Earl English, association president, said the

Duncan Jaycees, 60 per cent of whose members are North Cowichan residents, have "nothing to do with North Cowichan municipality."

The chamber program, designed to bring together all candidates in the election in an effort to stimulate public interest, is in keeping with nationwide annual Jaycee "get out the vote" campaigns.

North Cowichan Reeve Donald Morton, facing opposition in the election by a Chemainus candidate, voiced regret at the ratepayers' action.

PORT ALBERNI—A young logger described by a probation officer as a good worker who only got into trouble when he came to town was sentenced to 30 days when he pleaded guilty in Port Alberni court to two charges of passing worthless cheques.

Daryl Leonard Walker admitted writing cheques for a total value of $25 on an account which had been closed. Probation officer K. M. Richardson said Walker is still on suspended sentence with probation as the result of a previous offence.

Magistrate W. E. MacLeod ordered a 30-day sentence on each of the two charges, the sentences to run concurrently.

Hospital Not the Issue Morton Tells Murison

Home Refused

There aren't enough Nanaimo juveniles awaiting sentence to justify establishment of juvenile remand home in Nanaimo, Mayor Pete Maffeo has told Nanaimo Council of Women. It said home for boys awaiting sentence would be better than keeping them in jail.

NORTH COWICHAN — Increasing interest in the forthcoming municipal election was signified when close to 100 ratepayers attended a meeting Thursday.

Although all six candidates contesting two seats on North Cowichan council were invited to the gathering of the North Cowichan "South End" Ratepayers Association, only candidates from the southern end, Mrs. Elaine Dobbyn and D. A. Barr and incumbent Coun. Reginald Clegg of Crofton, were present.

Mrs. Dobbyn said she does not strive for equal representation of women on council but feels women should have a fair share in municipal affairs.

FORMER REEVE

Highlight of the evening was a speech by Gen. C. A. P. Murison, former North Cowichan reeve, who spoke as a member of the ratepayers' association.

He said: "Though at the present time the hospital issue is effective we are not yet out of the woods because a council hostile to that bylaw could possibly kill and certainly delay its implementation indefinitely."

"Therefore what is at stake at this election is nothing more or less than the future of the hospital."

North Cowichan council took some weeks to ratify a bylaw guaranteeing the municipality's share of the cost of a proposed new $3,600,000 regional hospital.

Gen. Murison urged ratepayers to vote for the two candidates from the southern end of the municipality where sentiment is strongly in favor of the hospital.

NOT AN ISSUE

Reeve Donald Morton took strong exception to the former reeve's remark, explaining he does not want to make the hospital issue his election campaign platform.

He said he wants people not to vote for candidates of any particular area in the municipality, but for the best possible representatives.

Mr. Hames is the first aldermanic candidate to announce his intention. Retiring Ald. S. B. Gordon has taken out papers, and Ald. Ian Birnie has said he will not seek office but is reported to be still in doubt.

NO NEW FACES

Ald. Mrs. Myrtle Vickberg will contest the mayoralty election with incumbent W. C. Moore.

No new faces have come on the electoral scene in Cumberland and Comox.

Commissioners Leland Watson and John W. Newman have taken out nomination papers in Cumberland and in Comox papers have been taken out, but not yet filed, by retiring Commissioners Len Burchall and William Longland.

VACANT SEAT

Ice on Bridge Spells Trouble for Drivers

ALBERNI — An ice-covered bridge deck spelled trouble for early morning drivers Thursday.

RCMP were called to Sproat Lake River bridge some four miles west of the city at 6:30 a.m. after a flatbed trailer truck jackknifed when it was braked to avoid hitting other vehicle which had skidded out of control on the bridge.

HIT RAILING

The truck, owned by Raynor and Bracht Ltd. and driven by Mike Mihaychuk of Port Alberni, hit the railing and a pickup truck driven by William Storborg, Port Alberni, ploughed into the larger vehicle.

Damage to Storborg's truck was estimated at $600. The larger flatbed was undamaged.

OFF THE ROAD

A car driven by Kenneth Bruner, Alberni, ran off the road at the end of the bridge and a station wagon, operated by Gordon Hills, Faber Road, plunged 30 feet down an embankment toward the river.

Most of the drivers who ran into trouble on the bridge were employees of MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Co.'s Sproat Lake division on their way to work.

Merchants Bilked Of $1,000

NANAIMO — Police are checking an outbreak of worthless cheque cashing which already has swindled city merchants of more than $1,000. Officers are seeking two young men dressed in work clothes who have been cashing what would appear to be company pay cheques—but which turn out to be forged.

Slouching Teen-Age Boy Snickers at His Crimes

NANAIMO (CP)—A 15-year-old boy has been sent to prison for 20 months for three burglaries.

The lad, who was transferred from juvenile court to police court, snickered as he pleaded guilty before Magistrate Lionel Beevor Potts to breaking into three homes. The burglaries netted a radio, jewelry, two blankets and some $5 in cash.

"How would you like to be sent to the penitentiary for the rest of your life?" the magistrate asked. "I can do that, you know."

The boy replied that it would not bother him.

During the court proceedings the lad slouched in his seat.

The magistrate told the boy had an unhappy background, said he would recommend that the 20-month term be served in the Haney correctional institution.

Food Thief Jailed

CHEMAINUS — Norman Giraux of Nanaimo was sentenced to four months in jail for breaking and entering a house on an Indian reserve here. Police said he stole groceries.

We'll Test And Talk Says U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Chief U.S. nuclear negotiator Arthur Dean said last night the United States "absolutely" would stage new nuclear tests during the renewed Geneva test ban negotiations with Russia.

Dean, speaking to a news conference on the eve of his departure for the new three-power nuclear talks, said it was up to President Kennedy whether the new tests would include bursts in the atmosphere. But he stressed, "we reserve complete freedom of action."

"Our slogan will be test and talk," he said. "We absolutely will have tests while the talks are going on."

Dean also indicated the United States was going back to the talks with Britain and the Soviet Union with no intention to submit new compromise proposals that would alter the treaty already proposed by the West.

"If there's going to be any treaty, the offers will have to come from Russia," he said.

South Africa Refused Even One Native Seat

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (UPI)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker last night disclosed that South Africa had refused to accept a Commonwealth suggestion that four of that country's 162 parliamentary seats should be held by native Africans. In a speech here Diefenbaker said the suggestion was made during last year's Commonwealth conference which saw South Africa withdraw from the Commonwealth over its apartheid racial policies. "They not only refused to consider four out of 162 as a solution to the impasse over South Africa's policies and its Commonwealth membership," Diefenbaker said, "they would not even give one."

Russia Criticizes Canada's Switch

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Canada Friday switched its vote on a nuclear question in the United Nations and promptly received criticism from the Soviet Union. The 16th General Assembly passed by a vote of 55 to 20 with 26 abstentions an African resolution declaring the use of nuclear weapons in war a crime against mankind and a violation of the UN charter. Canada voted against it but in earlier polling in the political committee it abstained. Russia's L. L. Mendelevich described this as an example of "NATO discipline."

The measure called for Acting Secretary-General Thant to consider calling an international conference to sign a treaty that would outlaw nuclear weapons in war. The United States, Britain and France also voted against the resolution because, they said, they could not accept an uncontrolled, unregulated prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, especially in self-defence.

"Maybe it's foolish, but I felt like I was scrounging from everybody. I was embarrassed, frightened and I avoided my neighbors."

"All these agencies were helpful but you know you were a charity case right from the start. They told us how to budget the money, they planned everything for us, we filled out all sorts of papers."

"Then, right out of nowhere, a Colonist 500 Fund cheque came for me. There was no suggestion on how to spend it, no restrictions on use of the money. It was as though the whole city was saying 'Merry Christmas, we're pulling for you.'"

Mrs. Johnston cashed the cheque, bought herself a pair of stockings, some clothes for the children and a roast for Christmas dinner.

Seven months ago, she found work and, with occasional help from relatives on the mainland, is making her own way again.

If you would like to see some of your money go toward making Christmas a little brighter for the city's less fortunate families, why not include a donation to the

Ottawa Cabinet Reported Horrified

LONDON (UPI)—The disclosure that Lord Privy Seal Edward Heath's secret speech to European Common Foreign Ministers last month in Paris was "leaked" to the United States has presented the British government with a grave crisis in Commonwealth relations.

The London Daily Herald reported that Canada is preparing a "final showdown" with Britain over Commonwealth Market negotiations.

BRITISH CONDITIONS
The paper said "horrified" Canadian ministers now had possession of the secret document, and that Prime Minister Diefenbaker planned to call for an immediate Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

The Heath speech, made in Paris on Oct. 10, is said to have stated British conditions for entering the Common Market, as well as disclosing the concessions the Macmillan government was willing to make.

JOIN IN DEMAND

The Herald said the contents of the leak would be passed on to the Australian and New Zealand governments who would then join in the demand for the conference.

Angry and bewildered Conservative and Labor MPs are said to be ready to force an explanation from Macmillan next week.

Macmillan is due to speak in the House of Commons on Tuesday about Britain's decision not to give Commonwealth members full details of Britain's negotiations with the Common Market countries.

An authoritative report in today's London Times said the British government was "dismayed" by the report that the secrecy of Common Market negotiations had been broken.

Commenting on a "leak" of British moves to join Common Market—withheld from Commonwealth governments—Finance Minister Fleming said last night Canada will not be content to gain its news by way of the United States.

Canada Not Alone In Market Stand

Continued and vacillating opposition by Ottawa to Britain's projected entry into the European Common Market is earning Canada the title of Bad Boy of the Commonwealth.

The accusing label is an unfair one, Canada is in fact acting as spokesman for other senior Commonwealth nations, and a lot of junior ones, too. What's more, Ottawa's fears and warnings are being echoed by an increasing number of Britain's leading politicians and industrialists.

Opposition, of necessity, lacks cohesion and a united voice, but it is mounting and may yet prevail.

The Daily Colonist has given much space to Britain's case and will continue to do so in the future, but there is another side to the picture.

Today on Page 5, the Colonist sets out the case for the opposition. It's a strong case. And it shows that Canada's role as Commonwealth spokesman has the backing of facts, figures and friends.

Denial of Text to Commonwealth Angers Press, Gaitskell in U.K.

LONDON (CP)—Several British newspapers today joined Opposition Leader Hugh Gaitskell in scoring the government for denying Canada the full text of Britain's opening statement to the European Common Market.

Reports that the statement was leaked to the United States by one of the six Common Market countries prompted the London Daily Express to exclaim "the bond of brotherhood of the Commonwealth peoples has been treated with contempt."

GAITSKELL AFFAIR
Gaitskell, leader of the Labor party, declared Friday that it is "absolutely wrong" for the U.S. to be aware of Britain's negotiating position for entering the Common Market while Commonwealth countries are refused the information.

The Times of London says Britain "should never have agreed to withhold Heath's statement from Commonwealth governments."

RINGS FOLLOW
Prime Minister Macmillan "will be expected to make a full and precise statement on the whole lamentable affair" in the Commons, it says.

The Yorkshire Post says the government's promise to keep the Commonwealth informed about the negotiations is beginning to ring hollow.

"Surely the government can handle matters more diplomatically than this," it says.

'Millions' in Gold In Trujillo Yacht?

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI)—The Dominican presidential yacht Angelita has been ordered back to port because of rumors of millions of dollars in gold smuggled out of the country aboard it, navy sources said yesterday.

Quoted army chief Gen. Rafael Trujillo, Jr., used the yacht to flee the country last week. He departed in the Aurora and flew to Paris. The yacht has been at sea since.

The order for the yacht to return to Santo Domingo was issued on an opposition report Trujillo sailed with $19,000,000 stored aboard the luxury craft. Subordinate officers aboard the yacht, the world's third largest, were reported to have been ordered to seize command of the vessel and imprison its captain, if necessary, to carry out the government orders.

OUTWARD CALM

A naval officer said, however, there had been "no problem and follows orders." He said the report of the treasure aboard "probably is true."

Outward calm returned today to newly rechristened Santo Domingo for the first time since an air force revolt and U.S. pressure last Sunday brought the 22-year "era of Trujillo" to a virtual bloodless end.

Belongings of Dominican industrialist Marco Gomez, close friend of Gen. Rafael Trujillo, are carried away by looters in Santo Domingo. Most of vandalism was aimed at homes and properties of Trujillo family and their close associates in wake of collapse of family's long-standing regime.—(AP Photos.)

U.S. Willing to Talk On Columbia Export

WASHINGTON (AP)—In-ment is willing to work out in the U.S. of Canadian power Secretary Stewart Udall "any reasonable agreement" produced by development of the Columbia River.

Canada would have to decide for itself how much of the power it wanted to export to the U.S. and the conditions of the export agreement. Udall said in a statement.

"It would . . . be nonsense for anyone to take the position that the United States would not honor any commitments made to return the power," he said, if Canada so desired when the export contract expired.

The Canada-U.S. Columbia River treaty has been ratified by the U.S. Congress but not by the Canadian Parliament, primarily because of a B.C. Ottawa disagreement.

A Gift Without Strings

The choice between charity and hunger is the most difficult and demoralizing decision a human being can make. Consider the Johnston family.

Death of her husband a few months before Christmas last year left Mrs. Johnston penniless and frantic. Welfare agencies came to her aid, of course, but she found the accustomed routine of questionnaires, investigations and chits almost too painful to bear.

Let her speak for herself:

"Maybe it's foolish, but I felt like I was scrounging from everybody. I was embarrassed, frightened and I avoided my neighbors."

"All these agencies were helpful but you know you were a charity case right from the start. They told us how to budget the money, they planned everything for us, we filled out all sorts of papers."

"Then, right out of nowhere, a Colonist 500 Fund cheque came for me. There was no suggestion on how to spend it, no restrictions on use of the money. It was as though the whole city was saying 'Merry Christmas, we're pulling for you.'"

Mrs. Johnston cashed the cheque, bought herself a pair of stockings, some clothes for the children and a roast for Christmas dinner.

Seven months ago, she found work and, with occasional help from relatives on the mainland, is making her own way again.

If you would like to see some of your money go toward making Christmas a little brighter for the city's less fortunate families, why not include a donation to the
